THE CAMPAIGN.

SOFT-SHELL RATIFICATION MEETING.

NEW SPEAKERS IN OLD TAMMANY.

Horatio Seymour's Nomination Enthusiastically Endorsed.

MEETINGS WITHIN AND WITHOUT THE HALL.

Speeches of John Cochrane, Lorenzo B. Shepard, John B. Steele, David T. Wright, Capt. Rynders, Alexander Ming, &c. &c.

Tammany Hall was crowded last evening, in response to a call from the "Young Men's Democratic Union Club," inviting the attendance of "all citizens in favor of the reelection of HORATIO SEYMOUR." Within, the Hall was densely filled, while a large assemblage besieged the doors without. Finally, the crowd of those were unable to gain admittance became so great that an out-door meeting was organized, and speakers sent to address them.

DODSWORTH'S popular band was engaged, and served greatly to enliven the evening.

The officers of the Club (JOHN COCHRANE, Esq., in the Chair) presided, and Mr. H. P. CARE, member of the Committee of Arrangements, opened the meeting by reading the call of the Club. Upon the platform we observed an unusual scarcity of City politicians, their places being supplied by fresh faces from the Rural Districts. When the call for the meeting had been read,

The Chairman (Mr. COCHRANE) came forward, and after the cheers which greeted him had subsided, spoke as follows:

MR. COCHRANE'S SPEECH.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We have called you together this evening to unite with us in expressing our ardent desires that the campaign in which we are engaged shall continue to be as prosperous and as successful as it has hitherto been. The Club, over which I have the honor to preside, has extended to you an invitation, as fellow-Democrats, to meet them in council this evening that we may learn what have been our past successes, and what probably shall be the prospect which shall attend us upon the 7th day of this month. (Cheers.) He who we have placed before us as our standard bearer and our chief is HORATIO SEYMOUR, (enthusiastic cheers,) Governor of the State of New-York, and by the will of the people to continue Governor of the State of New-York. (Renewed cheers.) The charges which have been brought against Governor SEYMOUR, are those which have been uttered in your ears daily—have become the theme of common conversation of the corners and by the byroads, and Democrats throughout the whole extent of the land have been sought to be made to believe that he whom we would elevate again to the place which he occupies now, is a man undeserving your confidence, and undeserving of the high dignity of Standard Bearer of the Democracy of the State of New-York. (Cheers.) Already has the war-cry been issued, and last evening those who were engaged against him must fulminate against his character such imputations as would separate him as a man, if true, and condemn him as an officer, if just. Let me detain you for a few moments before we proceed to the regular transactions of the meeting with a few observations upon some few of the features of these charges which have been levelled against him. It has been stated by those gentlemen who have taken the stand against us that this is a campaign in which all national principle, and that we are a dram-drinking, grovelling party, who have entered upon a contest which will find us, in the result, where the drunkard should be, grovelling in the streets, and with none to assist them. You all well recollect the Convention held at Syracuse by the Democratic party on the 6th of September, and you all equally well remember that upon that occasion the Democratic party took its position side by side with the National Administration—supporters of that Administration from its commencement down to that then time, and at the same time the firm supporters of the Cabinet of FRANKLIN PIERCE. (Cheers.) It was upon that great National principle of all conventions, we upon that great fundamental truth of the right of the people to govern themselves that that State Convention fixed itself firmly and steadfastly, and it was at that time also that upon that national stand they elevated as their State standard-bearer HORATIO SEYMOUR, who should bear their flag along in the coming contest. (Cheers.) But there was more than this to be done. When at the time that we took our position as National Democrats, we also took our position upon State issues; and when we elevated HORATIO SEYMOUR, can it be charged that we elevated him to a nomination because he fulminated, and by that fulmination checked the Maine Liquor Law Bill? (Cheers.) The reason is that he was a national man—the reason was that he possessed the confidence of Democrats—the reason was, that the firm heart of the Democratic party beat in unison with his own; and with him for our leader we felt sure that victory would be sure; and it was not, fellow-citizens, until a Whig Convention met some weeks after that time in Syracuse, and nominated MYRON H. CLARK, that the issue was forced upon us by the Whig party—liquor and freedom on the one side, and coercion and despotism on the other. (Cheers.) It is no issue of our own making, or of our own seeking—it is an issue which has been dragged before this community—was made a disposition of by Governor SEYMOUR in his Veto Message at the last session of the Legislature, and when on the 31st day of March last, he returned that bill "for the suppression of intemperance," but which was a bill for the suppression of freedom in our State, with his objections, that issue made was disposed of. He was then triumphant as he will be victorious in this second issue. Then it is folly for them to proclaim that this issue is made by the Democratic party. No; the Democratic party—as it always has—now stands in advance of the liberties of the people and the freedom of the country. They make no aggressive war upon principle anywhere—they stand as its champions. It is only when the Whig party with a White leader, in MYRON H. CLARK, whose motions are indicated by that wily politician who resides just beyond the prison walls in the city of Auburn, WM. H. SEWARD, it is then and then only, that Democrats stand fast to the principles they profess because they are attacked by those who are their enemies in principles and in fact. Now, fellow-citizens, let me direct your attention, for one moment, to a few of the leading features of that bill of CLARK, which Governor SEYMOUR vetoed—that bill, worse than which never was imposed on the English Statute Book and then which, if one in any measure so bad had been passed upon our forefathers, a revolution as speedy and as terrific as the lightening bolt would have followed. It was a bill for what? For the suppression of intemperance. How? By prohibiting the draught of intoxicating liquors. Why what nonsense and folly. Upon general principles who is there here to-night who will stand upright as a man and proclaim that morals are to be enforced—that disease is to be cured—that man no longer to be arrested by reason, are to be compelled by physical strength to the obedience to their fellows, whether those masters are principles in the mention of Whig politicians, or whether they are the shadows and nature of monarchical whims? What matters it to us if they are not true. Our principles must be voluntary or they are no principles at all. You all do know that compulsory laws are the bane of all Republics—they are the stand-by of all despotisms. You all do know that they have been banished from the statute book, and that every jurist and civilian have set their faces against them as anti-republican and untrue. This is but a compulsory law commanding to A, B, C, or D not (when he shall not) eat what he shall drink, not what he shall put on, but what he shall not drink, what he shall not eat, and, for it extends that far, what he shall not put on, for he may go in a state of nudity through the streets, so far as that principle is concerned.

But it is averred that because intemperance is the source of nine-tenths of the crime of this country, therefore this bill is to be taken out of the category of compulsory laws. Let us see how that is. There is another incentive, immensely more dangerous than liquor towards crime. That incentive is this: the natural disposition to do evil among men. Why, then, if the natural disposition to do evil among men is a greater and graver, and more constantly active power of evil than the drinking of liquor itself, why does not the honest human people send all those men who the phrenologists say preponderate to have the organ of destructiveness largely developed, up to Sing Sing, in order that they may no longer injure themselves or their fellow-citizens, or the community? You ask me where that argument would lead us; you ask how shall we have security of your liberties that theory is.

Time is another thing, fellow-citizens, that I would here allude to, but with which I shall not detain you much further. Now, then, you all have your rights. Our forefathers, who were as wise as to leave those rights as no conjecture, have clothed them in English; they have put them in bright and burning words upon the statute book of your State. And your Bill of Rights in its eleventh section has proclaimed that the people should be secure in their property, in their persons, in their houses, in their papers and their effects against unreasonable warrants, against unreasonable searches and seizures; and this Temperance bill, gentlemen, asks that upon the suspicion merely of any one of the four thousand magistrates in the State of New-York, a warrant, a search warrant be issued, and that search warrant shall run into the house, into the home, to the fireside, to the interior chamber, to the bed of every one of you; and there, with the myrmidons of the law at its heels, that search warrant shall look for concealed intoxicating liquors; whether there be more or less; whether it be against A's or B's house, that warrant shall take that liquor, and shall, after due action, by the magistrate, forfeit that liquor; in other words, this intoxicating liquor, which is the object of this hunt—this intoxicating draught, thus exposing in your houses, whether by the gallon or by the cask, or by the hogshead; whether it be in your domicil or in your store; whether it be lodged in yonder Custom-House or in yonder private Bonded Warehouse; whether it be in yonder gallon or in yonder ship, riding in your port—anywhere, all over this State, that warrant runs, and these Whig myrmidons of the law enter, arrest, confiscate, and forfeit. Is this law right? Will you submit to it? Is it not a violation of the first principle, an encroachment upon the first right upon which the Democratic party rests, and without which we would be in anarchy—worse than anarchy, for we would be in despotism? (Applause.) Fellow-citizens, this is but a tribe of the infamy of this bill. This bill would do more; taking your property, it is confiscated by the magistrate;—that which is pronounced to be inviolable by the Constitution is taken from you. The Constitution provides that you cannot be arrested or persecuted for your personal rights or, in your property rights, without due course of law, and here by this bill it is violated, thrown to the winds, and neither jury or judge is to sit upon the case. Any one of these magistrates, four thousand in number, in the exercise of an arbitrary discretion, may visit you at midnight, at the hour of dawn, or of the setting sun, or while you are in your beds, and take from you houseware, articles of apparel, articles of livelihood and of sustenance. His is this bill in that respect. There is one other feature to which I will direct your attention. You all do know that your Constitution proclaims that no man shall be obliged to criminate himself. What says this law? It says that if any individual—any white neckcloth, clerical gentleman, any gloomy fanatic, who may imagine that some honest Democrat—some of the great unwashed—any one of the great unwashed, should happen to know of an individual who had some liquor in his house, why, upon that white neckclothed individual making oath solemnly before this magistrate, that he has a grave suspicion that Jem the Unterrified knows where there is something to drink, Jem the Unterrified, [cheers and laughter,] is taken by the neck; to be brought by that white-neckclothed man before the magistrate; the magistrate says to him, "Jem, do you know of anybody who has anything to drink?" "No," says Jem, "and if I did I would not tell you." "Well then," says this most potent, grave and reverend Dogberry, the magistrate seated in the chair, "Jem, you must go to prison." Well, Jem goes to the prison. But what goes with him, fellow citizens? Your liberties and my liberties; your rights and my rights, and the rights of all of us go with him, and there in Jem's prison a martyr is imprisoned and sacrificed to this bill of MYRON H. CLARK. (Loud applause.) I will detain you no longer upon this subject. A few words in answer to that which has been levied against Governor SEYMOUR. It has been proclaimed by him who leads the attack against him, and who gave utterance to his thought last night that Governor SEYMOUR is the candidate of unlicensed free traffic in rum. Governor SEYMOUR has taken no such position. His veto message proclaims the contrary. It states that the present license laws are sufficient. Let those who ought observe them, and the people will be safe; especially will they be safe when the people have it in their power to elect those magistrates who will do their bidding, and grant licenses or not as the people may desire them. It is untrue, therefore—it is unjust to level such an aspersion at Governor SEYMOUR, and to place us, fellow-citizens, by implication here to-night, and elsewhere over this broad State, in the position of being the rum-drinking, the rum-rotten, and the drunkard party. Why, no; we stand uprightly on our feet; and if liquor abounds, and people voluntarily partake of it or indulge from it, they exercise their rights. Standing upon those rights you come here to night to proclaim that you are no rum-drinking, no rum-trafficking party, but a party that sees as issue a principle, a right of civil and religious freedom, and, seeing that right, will maintain it, and date the word. (Great applause.) But, gentlemen, our worthy friend who has taken upon himself the championship of Judge Bronson, has proclaimed, in other words, that the issue is this: Between good liquor—Judge BRONSON's bad liquor—HORATIO SEYMOUR and no liquor at all—MYRON H. CLARK. (Laughter.) Well, now, you all know that MYRON H. CLARK has no more liquor in his composition than a turnip has blood. You all know, therefore, that in respect to the third of these propositions of the worthy gentleman, it is true. Placing Judge BRONSON for good liquor, and HORATIO SEYMOUR for bad liquor, he places them both upon that hogshead which he pronounces to be the dregs and offer of the hung-note issue. (Laughter.) Well, now, if these are the two gentlemen on the opposite sides of the liquor issue, and if the issue is a hung-note issue—(renewed laughter)—let us place these two candidates, and I'll warrent you you will find that if DANIEL S. DICKINSON has the placing of Judge BRONSON, his candidate, he will station him nearest to the hung-note. (Laughter and cheers.) And now, fellow-citizens, it has been stated by this learned gentleman, upon the tribune last night, that this veto message was ready prepared to the hands of Governor SEYMOUR, at the time the bill was presented to him. That, gentlemen, I know to be untrue, and I cannot believe that my friend, DANIEL S. DICKINSON, when he uttered it, meant more by it than a figure of speech. I know very well this, that instead of being in such a state of fermentation, as DANIEL S. DICKINSON affirms, Governor SEYMOUR, some two months before the passage of that bill through our Legislature, informed me, himself, that if passed, he would veto it. (Cheers.) Who there any doubt about HORATIO SEYMOUR's position, or about his judgment? Have you any doubt about his capacity? None, whatever. [A voice: "None."] No, none at all. Governor SEYMOUR in a state of fermentation upon that occasion! Why, if you had witnessed our friend DANIEL S. DICKINSON, as he skipped, and hopped, and jumped upon the tribune last night, you would have thought there were some fermented Aops liberated on that occasion, and the brewers present would have seized upon DANIEL S. DICKINSON as better material for beer than any of the hops of Otsego or Chenango. (Loud cheers and laughter.) And that he calls the "beer issue"—the "beer issue" concentrated upon the hops of DANIEL S. DICKINSON. Why, gentlemen, would those of you who are here from "Fatherland" to-night, been your ingenious upon such an extraordinary compound of fermentations as my honorable friend? No, he would be unwilling to subject himself to the process, for he might percolate be Germanized, or he might be Irishized; if anything, he could not be Americanized by that process. But let me tell him one thing, and let me announce it to you, that whether his hops be employed in this campaign or not, Governor SEYMOUR's victory next Tuesday night will teach you all to drink a little of the DICKINSON ale. (Cheers.) Now, fellow-citizens, one word in respect to your local ticket. You have nominated a ticket which will carry this City, which will sweep it clean through. Upon that ticket you have a FRANCIS, (cheers,) you have a MATTHIAS COZZENS, (cheers,) you have a list of worthies whom I do not remember, and it is not necessary, because we are pushed for time, each and all of whom you will support. The ticket is neither Hard nor Soft, and because it is neither, because it is Democratic Wood, therefore was it that the Adamantines—the Adamantines who were too hard, who have nominated the hardest hickory Soft that could be found. (Cheers.) And that hard—that utmost hard—to preserve the principles of the Administration, to guard their immaculate purity—surrendered his blushing honors to a pudding Soft, WILSON G. HUNT! (Tremendous applause.) Oh, what an abandonment of principle was there, my fellow-countrymen! Principle no longer—the Stuyvesant pear-tree is dead! (Cheers.) Fellow-citizens, in taking my seat, allow me to call your attention to the great importance of this campaign. The hours, the minutes are rolling on. You have now before you an opportunity of effecting that which you long have sought the opportunity to do—that of defeating the Whigs, and of conferring a glorious triumph on HORATIO SEYMOUR. (Great applause, during which the speaker sat down.)

MR. S. WALLACE COZZ was introduced by the Chairman, and read the following

ADDRESS OF THE YOUNG MEN'S DEMOCRATIC UNION CLUB TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW-YORK.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: In this crisis we feel bound to issue to you a calm and earnest appeal. Our last address to the Democracy was adopted August 26, 1853. It had for its object the union of the Democratic party. For this, our second appeal, we claim a still higher motive—the union of all good citizens in defence of their constitutional rights and franchises.

We do not expect that our voice will be potent enough to still the storm of passion, prejudice and error. We claim for ourselves no peculiar merit; but we may, by particular study of whose lives is the effect of political events and systems, we ask you, citizens of the State of New-York—the greatness and prosperity of which State we believe to be now put in peril—to listen to the arguments which our reflection has suggested. If you find them sound, receive and act upon them; if otherwise, reject them. In any event, let an enlightened regard for the rights of your fellow-citizens, and the best interests of your State, govern your conduct.

On the 7th day of November next you will have to decide between two systems—the restrictive or coercive system, and all the wildest "isms" of the day, in the person of MYRON H. CLARK, and the voluntary or republican system, a wise regard for equal rights, and fidelity to the Union and the Constitution, in the person of HORATIO SEYMOUR.

We have already chosen the latter; and for these reasons:

Because, after a critical consideration of his acts, antecedents, and aspirations, we are convinced that MYRON H. CLARK is not fit or safe to be the Governor of this State.

Neither his character nor talents could add any lustre to the office which has been filled by so many men justly famous in American history. The mere fact that such a man is thrust before you, is the best evidence that he is simply a puppet of other men's designs; and that, in the hands of WM. H. SEWARD, he is ready to act any violence or absurdity to which he may be instigated. The real purpose of his election in the return of WM. H. SEWARD to the United States Senate. The means relied on to accomplish both is the "Maine Law." The ultimate object is to create a sectional party, on the basis of abolition, and to make the State of New-York the leader in an unholy crusade against the Constitution of the Union and the rights of her sister States. The "Maine Law" is the hobby on which the dangerous and unscrupulous men who pull the wires of their puppet candidate for Governor hope to ride easily into power. That law is the entering wedge—solid fixed, a hundred others are ready to follow it, and divide for ever the Constitution of your State into such pieces as may suit their cupidity, their ambition, or their intolerance.

To the dangers of that law, permit us once more to direct your attention.

It not only violates the Constitution, but it impairs also the sanction, and saps the foundation of all other laws, by taking away the rights on which they rest, viz.: Security of person and property. It annuls the dearest obligation in your bill of rights—"That the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, ought not to be violated." It substitutes the arbitrary will of the magistrate for the due course of law. It supersedes the guarded provisions of every former statute, by the uncontrolled license of a later one. It elevates a single exceptional enactment above the immemorial custom of the common law. Particularly it takes away from the citizen the right of trial by jury—a right so precious to every Anglo-Saxon, that no effort, physical or mental, no expenditure of time or money, no danger of person, no hazard of fortune or of life, has ever been thought too dear in its defence. The noblest efforts of genius—the most admirable displays of patriotism—have, from the earliest time of English story, been made in its behalf. It has ever been considered the grand bulwark of the rights and liberties of the citizen. Wrest that from us, and where is our defence? Or what shall we rely? To what shield for safety from the usurpations of power and the designs of evil men? And this bulwark, it is not unknown to you, citizens, would have long since been broken down but for the heroic stand of HORATIO SEYMOUR, and his bold veto of that bad bill.

We will not weary you with reciting the long list of illustrious patriots, the grandest efforts of whose lives were directed to sustain this right against the assaults of bigotry or the machinations of power. It is sufficient that you know them. But you should call to mind, as this time particularly, that PATRICK HENRY, of Virginia, that ardent patriot, thought it the best ground of opposition to the Constitution of this Confederacy, that at first proposed, that it did not guarantee the trial by jury, and refused his assent to it unless so amended. You should remember that THOMAS JEFFERSON said: "My chief fear is the tyranny of Legislatures."

Pause long, we entreat you, therefore, before you surrender to the tyranny of your would-be legislators that very right which, of all others, has given dignity to the English name, and elevated the citizens of Great Britain and America above those of any other country. "The Government of most States," says Sir JAMES MACKINTOSH, "protects acknowledged innocence; the law of England is a power sufficient to cover with its shield whatever is not ascertained, demonstrated, convicted, legally guilt." Such is the law of our mother *England. Shall republican America be contented to de*serve a less encomium at the hands of her historians? Shall we, to pander to the madness of an hour, pass a law which deprives the citizen of his property without benefit to the State; which assumes his guilt without proof, and punishes his innocence without a trial? Shall we recklessly expose our persons, our property, our reputations and our homes, to the cupidity of the knave, and the tender mercies of the bigot.

Permit the election of MYRON H. CLARK, and you elect this system with him—a system from which the trial by jury is banished—under which the person of the citizen has no protection; his property no security; his reputation no safeguard, and his home no sanctity—a system which, commencing with the prostration of the rights and honor of your own State, aims ultimately to attack every other portion of the Union against the other; to adopt into its mongrel fraternity abolitionism, and every other fanatical influence; to substitute geographical lines, hitherto unknown, for party divisions on principles well defined; to alienate the affections of the sister States, and finally, unless the good providence of God shall overrule and frustrate these dark designs, to exhibit to the world the sad spectacle of the mightiest of all republics hurried to an untimely end by its own divisions and the inordinate ambition of unworthy citizens.

To us, fellow-citizens, the election of HORATIO SEYMOUR, the defeat of the Maine Law, and the disappointment of its fanatical abettors of every shade and stripe, appear to offer the only means of escape from consequences so disastrous.

We appeal to every citizen, without distinction of party, to support him with his vote, his efforts and his influence.

We appeal to you, citizens, to vote for HORATIO SEYMOUR—for the trial by Jury, for the rights of the citizen, for the loyal defence of the Union and the Constitution.

We appeal to you to vote for all which has made us great or keeps us happy; and we adjure you by every sentiment of justice, patriotism and self-respect, to visit with the darkest and censure they deserve, CLARK, SEWARD, and every other conspirator against your rights, your liberties, and the prosperity of your country. To the pride, the justice, the conscience of every citizen, we appeal.

Upon the wisdom, the virtue and the patriotism of all good men we fearlessly rely.

The Chairman announced the receipt of letters from several distinguished Democrats, which, owing to the lateness of the hour, he would not read, but handed to the Reporters for publication.

SAYVILLE, Monday, Oct. 30, 1854.

GENTLEMEN: Your kind invitation to address the mass meeting of the Young Men's Democratic Union Club, on the evening of Nov. 3, has just been received.

The delay was owing to its direction to the Islip Post-office instead of the Sayville Post-office, from which letter I receive my regular mails. I am reluctantly compelled to decline your invitation by an engagement on that date in a neighboring State—an engagement which cannot postpone. I feel deeply grateful to you all for the zealous and active aid I have given to our State ticket, and its success, which seems hardly to admit of a doubt, will be in a great degree owing to the friendly warmth and enthusiasm with which you have supported it.

I assure you that I most fully appreciate your efforts, and hope that an opportunity will present for me to show that appreciation. Each and every day brings thousands of fresh accessions to our ranks. While we are moving on in solid column under the banner of the regular Democracy, and the championship of human rights, our opponents are breaking up in every direction around us. Most hopeful and brilliant are the prospects of the 7th of November next. Yours, very truly,
WM. H. LUDLOW.

To Messrs. L. F. HARRISON, C. F. CARBERLING and others.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Nov. 2, 1854.

GENTLEMEN: I have received your kind invitation in behalf of the "Young Men's Democratic Union Club," to address the mass meeting at Tammany Hall this evening, and until to-day I hoped to have had the pleasure of accepting it. But I find myself obliged to leave town on professional business, and must, therefore ask you to excuse me.

Under other circumstances it would have given me great pleasure to say a few words to my fellow citizens, who will assemble at Tammany Hall this evening, upon a single point in the public mind, I allude to what is commonly known as the Maine Liquor law. The author of such a legislative act is one of the candidates for Governor of this State—the fearless Executive who vetoed it is his competitor. The Whig Convention endorsed the bill of Mr. CLARK, and set aside all the prominent men of their party to make him their candidate. The Democratic Convention warmly approved the veto. The issue is thus fairly made between Governor SEYMOUR and his associates on the ticket upon one side, and Mr. CLARK and his upon the other. There can be no rational doubt that the real contest is between these two tickets, and that no other has a possible chance of success. In such a contest it seems to me no liberal and just man ought to hesitate which course to espouse. In my judgment the Prohibition act of Mr. CLARK, if passed into a law and executed, would, in its invasions of personal liberty, and confiscation of private property, surpass the wildest excesses of any mob of which I ever heard. I greatly misapprehend the intelligence and spirit of the people of this State, if they do not in the coming canvass rebuke this act, and sustain those who arrest and oppose it with overwhelming strength. Organization and vigilance are alone requisite to make this result certain, and if, in this respect, the interior of the State is as well prepared as this metropolis, a brilliant victory awaits Governor SEYMOUR, and the distinguished man associated with him upon the ticket.
Yours, truly, J. VAN BUREN.

MR. SHEPARD'S SPEECH.

LORENZO B. SHEPARD, Esq., was introduced. He was received with loud cheers, and said:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: It is perhaps one of the most glorious features of the Democratic character, that it is always ready to respond to any infringement of personal liberty, or to any violation of the Constitution. Consider the history of that party from its organization, and never in one single instance has it proposed any assault upon the Constitution, nor yet upon any right of any citizen of the country. Its doctrine has uniformly been Equal Rights to all, a preservation of Constitutional obligation, and a discharge of Constitutional duty. But, fellow-citizens, it has been the peculiar characteristic of other parties to assault the Constitution, and to trample upon popular rights. The Constitution of the United States was assailed, and an attempt was made to strike from it that glorious Veto power which has so often preserved the liberties of the people; and recently, an assault has been made upon the Constitution of our own State, and not only an assault upon that Constitution but an assault upon principles which, I may say with propriety lie more deeply at the foundations of Republican Government than even the Constitution itself. And we have met to-night, fellow-citizens, to consider of this matter. I see around me here in this mighty throng, a great many faces of old friends from whom I have been alienated in my political action. I know that nothing would have brought out the true and strong Democratic energies of such men as these but an attempt to violate the Constitution. And I always knew that when any attempt against Constitutional right and popular right was made, every man of Democratic impulses, in whatever section of any party he might be found, would rally to the maintenance of popular right and Constitutional freedom, and the result has proved that I was right in my judgment. I do not see here among me Senator DICKINSON, but I read the speech which he made last night, and ascertained that he has not discovered the Constitution has been invaded, or if he has, he does not think it a matter worth alluding to in his speech. I heard the speech of Mr. O'CONOR last night, a very able speech—but one which utterly ignored the existence of any attack upon the Constitution; and I could not but regret that men who ranked as Democrats, men whose blood should have boiled in their veins when the Constitution was struck at, should be talking of any other issue than of the constitutional issue which has been raised here, in which our principles are involved, and upon which we must pronounce. Mr. DICKINSON, in the midst of this exciting contest, begged your attention to an issue of his own. He asks you to forget that your houses are invaded, to forget that your rights are in danger of being sacrificed, and to join him in a crusade against FRANKLIN PIERCE, upon a series of questions which have been disposed of by the Democratic party, and which I do not think will be raised again for a quarter of a century. Now, fellow-citizens, we are wise to fight in that contest, wherein our dearest rights are involved, and to look at that question which most closely concerns us. Why, if Judge BRONSON were a devoted friend of the Constitution, he would say at once—"It has been in the good pleasure of Divine Providence the destiny of HORATIO SEYMOUR to become the vindicator of the Constitution, and the protector of freemen against assaults upon their freedom; and whatever may be my opinion in reference to that man's sentiments, I will stand by him in this contest, because I desire Constitutional liberty to prevail over fanaticism." (Cheers.) Why should he in this contest marshal a small body of men off in a corner by themselves, upon questions which are not connected in the same test by anybody? I would like to know what the platform of these people is upon this Constitutional question. I understood it when Judge BRONSON wrote his first letter. He then said that HORATIO SEYMOUR might as well have signed the Prohibitory Liquor bill. Now, that we all understand it. But he benefitly [illegible] modified his opinions because, when he expressed that opinion in his first letter, he had not read the bill; and after he had read the bill, and after the Temperance men had nominated MYRON H. CLARK, he changed his way of thinking, and he rather thought that on the whole Governor SEYMOUR was right in the course which he took; and now his opinions have undergone no change down to the sixth and last letter, in which he announces that everybody knows he has no desire to fill any public office. Now, some people of very little judgment would naturally ask what then on earth he was running for Governor for, but perhaps other sensible people might reply that his chance of election was so small that he might nevertheless say he did not hope or intend to fill any public office. Now, fellow-citizens, I have not got the Veto Message before me to-night at my length, but I recollect, addressing a large meeting of my fellow-citizens last night, but one or two things in reference to this measure I would like to say to you. In the first place just consider that the selling of liquor is proposed to be put in the hands of a special class in the community—not to be limited to men of good character, not to be restricted to men of correct deportment and of steady habits, but it is to be put into the hands of a special class in the community. "No man shall be at liberty to sell intoxicating liquor for any purpose who is a peddler, or the keeper of or interested in any bowling or victualling-house, grocery or fruit-store, bar-room, confectionery, inn, tavern, or any other place of public entertainment; or the keeper of or interested in any museum, theatre, or other place of public amusement; nor the captain, commander, agent, clerk, or servant of any vessel or boat."

Now I wish only to remark upon this, that as no man who keeps a museum is to be at liberty to sell liquor under any circumstance, that great disciple of temperance, Mr. BARNUM, would be utterly prevented from selling liquor on the ground that he has a Woolly Horse, and keeps a Feejee Mermaid. [Applause and laughter.] Now, then, fellow-citizens, if there is anything well settled in this country, and if there is anything which ought to be well settled in it, it is that every man's house is his castle. The Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of pretty much every State in the Union, provides that the people should not be subjected to unnecessary searches, and that, when they are made, the places to be searched, and the thing to be searched for and seized, shall be described. This bill proposes utterly to abrogate one portion of that provision. It authorizes the issuing of warrants, not against any person, but against gin generally; not describing with any definiteness the thing to be searched for, and then it is followed by this monstrous provision, that whenever a search warrant is issued to any premises, and any liquor shall be found on those premises, not only the liquor that is searched for, but all the other liquor found upon the premises shall be seized by the officer; so that, to use an illustration, of which I awaited myself last night, if a search warrant should be issued against my friend, the President of this Club, upon a suspicion that he had a five gallon demijohn in one corner of the Bonded Warehouse, which he intended to sell, it would be the duty of the officer executing that warrant, to take every cask of liquor in the storehouse, to remove it, and to retain it until it was destroyed, or otherwise disposed of as under the act. Now, fellow-citizens, that seems a remarkable assertion to make in reference to any law, but it is exactly and entirely true. Now, such a law as that could not be executed. [A voice: "No, Sir."] Who would permit it to be executed? [A voice: "No one."] Another voice: "Let him." [Laughter.] Now, look at the consequences of it. In the first place, not only does the annoyance of this search fall upon the man against whom the search is instituted, but it falls upon every one who owns any property of the description against which the search is instituted, on the premises where the search is made. And hence it might well be, and not only that, but necessarily must be, in a great many instances, that persons sending property here for transportation would utterly lose that property without any notice whatever that any proceeding had been instituted against it, because where this vast quantity of liquor has been seized from the Bonded Warehouse, the officer who makes the seizure is not obliged to serve a personal notice upon the man owning or claiming to own the liquor. Not at all. He goes to the premises where that person resides, and to the place where he was last known to have stopped—the Astor House, if you please—and upon some person of mature age in those premises he serves a notice that he is about to destroy—may be very many thousands of dollars worth—of this man's property; and when the man gets the notice, as perhaps he does in the course of time, he ascertains that his property has been made the material for a grand bonfire, and that his morals have been preserved by making himself and his family penniless. Well, fellow-citizens, such a law as that is simply so absurd that it is not worth talking about. But let me allude to one subject which the President of this club mentioned with great force, and that is in reference to its denial of the recognized rights of men under the Constitution who are charged with criminal offences. Now, if any man in the community, I do not care how bad he may be, is arrested, charged with any criminal offence—I care not how deep may be its dye—that man can never be examined as a witness against himself. The law is his shield and protector. It will not permit him to be inquisitorially followed by any officer of the law, and when he is asked, "How say you, prisoner—guilty or not guilty"—if he closes his mouth and refuses to answer, the law in its mercy and in its wisdom and justice, directs that a plea of not guilty shall be entered for that man.

But how is it under this law? A man who comes into Court—indeed, it is true, and no fiction—is by law adjudged to be guilty until he proves himself to be innocent. If a man has received from another any liquor, the man who delivers that liquor is subjected to two or three intendments of law. In the first place, it is presumed that he sold the liquor. The law says that where one man delivers liquor to another, it shall be presumed that it is sold. If I give a glass of wine to a friend in my house, the law presumes that I sell it to him, and that I take money upon that sale. And then, again, it is presumed that the sale was an unlawful sale. Now, this law provides that for mechanical or chemical or sacramental purposes there may be a sale of liquor, but this very law which permits the sale of liquor pronounces generally that every delivery of liquors shall be taken to be a sale, and that every sale shall be taken to be an unlawful sale. Now, what becomes of the provision of your Constitution, and the provision of the Common Law that no man shall be held to accuse himself? What becomes of the provision of your Constitution, that an man's property shall be taken from him except by due process of law? Why, these rights are let down, broken down, and trodden underfoot of a soulless fanaticism—a fanaticism which, having but one idea, would govern the whole of this broad country upon that idea, and would ride into and overthrow every man's rights. Am I not right in the view I take of the matter? It seems to me that my views are not fallacious but true and accurate. Now let us go a step further. My learned friend, the President, (Mr. COCHRANE,) has described to you the process of examination which a man is subjected to who is suspected of selling liquor, and he has illustrated with greater force and vividness than I can do, the danger of an inquisitorial proceeding to compel men to accuse themselves. Let me add one remark to what he said upon that subject. When a person is brought up for examination how long may that examination be conducted? It may be for one day, or two days, or a week. There is no limit, and under that law there can be no habeas corpus. A man must lie in jail, rotting in the dungeons of the Tombs until the enemy who is persecuting him chooses to release him. The Constitution, his safeguard and protection, has ceased to be of service to him. His fellow-citizens cannot aid him. If he desires to be free he must bow the knee before that man who has incarcerated him, because the issues of liberty and imprisonment are placed in the hands of that man;—and the issue is upon this bill of MYRON H. CLARK. This bill, which Governor SEYMOUR so manfully vetoed, not flinching and trembling, as was suggested by Mr. DICKINSON, but with manliness and fortitude—a manliness and fortitude, permit me to say, with all respect, which Judge BRONSON did not show in his six letters upon the same question. [Cheers and laughter.] In this contest HORATIO SEYMOUR, one of the purest and best men who ever lived—a man against whose private life no human being has ever yet ventured to breathe a breath of slander—is our standard-bearer. What do the Democratic party owe to him, aside from this fact? Never in any one single instance has he borne arms against any member of the Democratic party. I know that he has been assailed and cruelly aspersed, but let any man put his finger upon a single member of the Democratic party whom he has proscribed. There is not one, but in this contest he stands in a position higher than that which any man can occupy in a mere party contest. His labor is entwined with the destinies of this State—his action is dictated by the purest patriotism and devotion to the Constitution; and I know that all who love it, and that all who have heretofore met in Tammany will rally to his support, and that we shall accomplish for him and for ourselves a victory which will protect the Constitution against the assaults of demagogues in the future. [Loud applause.] Why, fellow-citizens, if our Constitution is to be made the sport of party notions—if demagogues are to impair the sacred obligation of its provisions, our Government ceases to be a Republic, [cheers;] and all those elements which have made its glory are to fall one by one, and disappear. [Applause.] Our noble star-spangled flag, which is now recognized over the whole globe, and, in its most modest release, would cause to command that respect which is due now command, and twenty-five millions of freemen, assuming more importance, is in vain; for instead of freedom what they had gained in population, would be forgotten in the object of respect of freemen who love freedom, and for all men who love Republican institutions, but the object of pity and contempt and despicable notice. [Cheers.] They would be shown in history as men who had rights but could not keep them—who enjoyed constitutional freedom, but could not maintain it, and who fell or shrunk like cowards before the onslaught of demagogues, instead of rallying around the man who opposed that onslaught, and rushing forward with him to victory, and to the maintenance of their most sacred rights. [Immense cheering.]

MR. JOHN B. STEELE, of Otsego County, then came forward and said:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: This tremendous gathering to-night satisfies me that you agree with me in the idea, that if there ever was a period in the history of the State or nation that required the calm, serious, and deliberate consideration, and the independent and honest action of every elector—that period is now. Old party lines have, to some extent, been broken down. Fanaticism and error are running wild everywhere, and in a period like this, if we would sustain the dignity of the Empire State,—which is our pride and our boast,—it is Americans like we have at the helm; a man tried and true—a man who has the nerve, and integrity, and ability to stop the tide of fanaticism, and say to those vast one currents which threaten to overthrow the Constitution and law, "Thus far, shalt thou come, and no further." [Cheers.] Such a man we have in our present Chief Magistrate, HORATIO SEYMOUR. (Loud applause.)

I have been my good fortune to be intimately acquainted with him, personally, private and politically, for many years, and I agree with my friend who has just sat down, that there is no man yet been found with sufficient hardihood to assail his integrity or his private character. [Applause.] Gentlemen, he stands above reproach, as pure minded, and honest a man as ever lived, and I wonder that the words did not blister upon the tongue of that man last night when he undertook to assail him. He did not certain

FRANCE.

The Russian Prisoners—Political Economists.

Theatrical, Literary, and Miscellaneous Gossip.

[Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.]

PARIS, Thursday, Sept. 28, 1854.

I mentioned lately that I did not know in what sort the Russian General Bosquet, designated as Bomarsund, was to be put. I have learned since. He is made to predict the fall of Sebastopol. He declares that fortress to be quite as formidable as it has been represented, if attacked from the sea; but if attempted from behind, (just what the allies are doing,) it must yield, as did Bomarsund. This is getting aid and comfort from the enemy, indeed, as ST. ARNAUD got provisions from the "Tartar population of the Crimea." ST. ARNAUD is the Mungo Park of Southern Russia.

The rank and file of the Russian prisoners, provisionally quartered in the island of Aix, off La Rochelle, are receiving company from the main land. The accounts given of them are not what the French had been led to expect. They are represented as fine looking men, with little or nothing of the white bear about them; they do not devour candles with that avidity which has been supposed to characterize their proceedings, when in presence of that succulent aliment; they all understand French, and their Lieutenant Colonel speaks it without an accent. The latter was called upon for a speech in behalf of his comrades, to a crowd of visitors. He complied, and at the close of his discourse, said that he was every day more and more convinced of the truth of the tradition, that the French are the most amiable, courteous and generous of nations. For a year back, the French have been calling the Russians all the names in the calendar—liars, thieves, murderers, ravagers, brutes. Which is the Cossack of the two, the Russian or the Frenchman?

Two Mayors have just been dismissed from office, both for misdemeanors while the cholera was absent. One of the Prefectorial decrees says that "Mr. LEMAITRE, during the presence of the scourge, did not perform any of the duties devolving upon him, in a view to baffle it." The other says of M. DALLET that "he furtively left the town at a moment when the citizens were most in need of encouragement and succor." A country Mayor, you know, wears a blouse, a cotton cap, and wooden shoes, and talks patois. This decreasing at him about his choleratic inefficiency, is in the last degree grotesque; however, it is one of the prerogatives of a prefect, under the new regime, to render himself ridiculous while seeking to appear sublime.

We are to have the London police system in Paris. M. BILLAULT has reported it to the Emperor, and the Emperor has decreed it, upon M. BILLAULT's report. Competent men were sent some time ago to London, to study the system upon the spot, and found it decidedly superior to that of Paris. In this piping time of alliance, it was easy to introduce an innovation from England, without wounding French susceptibilities. So the report does not hesitate to eulogize policemen, and depreciate sergens de ville; the two nations now only forming one. The principal modification is the increase of men from 750 to 3,000, and the subdivision of the sections into much less extensive beats. The annual expense will be nearly six million francs, three times the present outlay. The Minister thinks that Paris will be only too glad to support this extra charge, in consideration of the absolute security which will result from it. The State, however, will pay two thirds of the bill, upon the recognized principle, in France, that where peace and order in a city imply to a certain degree peace and order in the country, the expense should be shared by both the city and the country. Besides, the State may find a compensation in the diminished necessity of garrisoning the Capital. Some thousands of soldiers may be removed to points where their support costs less. "The city, rapidly becoming the most beautiful in the world, will speedily be the safest, a boon due to the will of your Majesty." The decree follows the report, and a credit of half a million francs succeeds the decree. The new service is to be in operation before the opening of the Crystal Palace.

Should New-York be threatened with an efficient police, the rowdies, the rascals and the jail-birds would at once have an indignation meeting in the Park, and would perhaps have sufficient influence with the municipality to avert the odious innovation.

The Aeronautic and Meteorological Society are taking steps to commence in concert the grand experiment of aerial navigation. The last number of their bulletin says that the members, being desirous of taking the initiative in the scheme, have drawn up the plan of a balloon, able to stay a month in the air without touching the earth, to carry twenty persons, and to ride five miles from the ground, into the region of the steady currents, and above the sphere of stormy and other disturbing causes. No use whatever has yet been made of these currents, the trade winds and the monsoons, while numberless efforts have been made to obtain a motive power. The society contemplate an excursion from Oxford to Astraden and back, by means of the regular currents. This accomplished, progress cannot fail to be made from day to day, and the President thinks that our nephews will wonder that the atmosphere was not always the grand route of travel.

The great hotel, of which I spoke at length in my last, is definitively named L'Hotel de l'Univers. At this moment of Grand Expositions and of a central rendezvous at Paris for all nations, the most universal title is the best. M. PASCOUE, the principal stockholder, has gone to the Pyrenees to purchase marble for the internal and external decoration of the building.

Two American mails were delivered together last Tuesday. The postman brought the papers addressed to LIVINGSTON & WEBB in one huge bundle on his back. There were in all 175 numbers—$6 50 worth of postage—but not a single TIMES, out of six that were sent.

The Paris papers have paid considerable attention to the reception and opening performances of GRISI and MARIO at New-York. They are unanimous in the belief that the Mr. COUTTS episode and the high-priced seat affair were dexterous interpolations of the manager. American criticism is somewhat ridiculed, and several paragraphs are translated. One comparison is thought especially funny, in which the writer considers MARIO's recitative as an excellent method for "easy conversation." I trust—indeed I know—that it is not you who are guilty of this very singular opinion.

An idea having obtained currency that the officers commanding the troops in the Hippodrome's mimo-drama of "Silistria" were genuine officers of the army, lent by Marshal MAGNAN for the purpose, the Patrie has denied it, semi-officially. The officers are equerries by profession. Public opinion was wounded at the supposition that Frenchmen of military rank were fighting sham-fights at the Hippodrome, and on the Russian side, some of them, too.

A beggar appeared the other day in the Place de la Bourse, with a notice upon his hat to the following effect:

"I am without resources of any kind. If the Emperor only knew it!"

This was an impertinence, or at least an impropriety. A policeman was of this opinion, and arrested the mendicant. The latter resisted somewhat, when the policeman said, as an inducement, "Come along, the Emperor shall know it!"

The press, generally, is somewhat comforted by the following statistics of its influence, resulting from the late temporary exclusion of the critics from the Grand Opera. The first night produced 10,000 francs—the maximum. Not a word was whispered of the opening of the new artistes, of the performance. The second night produced 6,000 francs; and the third 5,000. The breach was now healed, and the Constitutionnel and three of the organs resumed their musical feuilletons. On the fourth night, the receipts jumped at one bound to 9,000 francs! A difference of eight hundred dollars in one night, determined by the silence or the good will of the press.

You remember that I told you, at the time, of the supposed conspiracy, at the theatre of the Porte St. Martin, against the life of the Emperor, during one of the performances of "Schamyl." Some time after, I mentioned that MELINGUE, the impersonator of "Schamyl," was taken sick, and was obliged to suspend his representations. The quidnuncs of Paris, while waiting for the news from Sebastopol, have invented a canard to the effect that MELINGUE was no more sick than you or I, but had been arrested as the ringleader of the conspiracy! There are people in Paris who believe such things, palpably ridiculous and slanderous as they are.

A perfumer advertises "Washington Podephile Cosmetic." This is a powder, and is "used by the elegants of America, between the foot and the sole of the boot, to prevent any unpleasant emanations."—(Hence the word podephile.) But its most valuable quality is its power to preserve from cholera! Out of five thousand persons who employed it in America, during the late visit of the scourge, not one was attacked by it!!

The following scandalous affair has excited no little sensation where it has become known; it was hushed up successfully by the party implicated, and such Parisians as have heard of the facts, are ignorant of the proper names to be attached to the story. Some days ago a gentleman called upon the proprietor of a prominent daily paper, saying that his wife, (a songstress of renown,) had paid for some time back to the musical critic of the paper in question, the sum of 8,000 francs a year for his favorable opinion. Of late she became disgusted with the bargain and with herself for having made it. She sought to bring the arrangement to a close, but the critic would not consent. Whereupon the narrator, the lady's husband, thought proper to acquaint the proprietor of the paper with the disgraceful transaction in which his feuilletonist was involved. The editor was very much shocked, took the precaution to have the statement repeated before witnesses, dismissed his critic without explanations, and engaged another. The next day the injured gentleman called for explanations himself. It was now found that the complainant had taken his passports and had crossed the frontier; the wife declined making any accusations, and there was no proof of the bribery and corruption. The critic had had influence enough to induce the husband to absent himself for a while, until the sensation subsided, and to obtain from the wife a promise not to peach. On his regular day his usual weekly musical review appeared, as if nothing whatever had happened! He is reinstated in his position, and passes for an injured man, as the complainant has fled the country. The critics of Paris are supposed, and, with this exception, I believe truly, to be uninfluenced in the expression of their opinions, pecuniarily. If they are not, their judgments are good for nothing, of course. The particular critic implicated, in this case is the most able musical critic in Paris—but it would seem that he has not always been the most sincere. I understand that he says, in his defence, that there was no bribery in the case. He considered the lady in question the best singer extant in her walk, and invariably said so. She valued this service at 8,000 francs a year, and placed that sum at his disposal. That was all. She had never induced him by money to express an opinion that he did not entertain; and this opinion he would not say the less have expressed, even without the 8,000 francs. This is specious, but will convince no one, I imagine.

A letter from Leghorn, where ROSSINI has lately been residing for his health, represents him as sinking under the consequences of a recent violent attack. He is said to have lost all interest in, and even cognizance of, passing events.

An own nephew of BELLINI—GIUSEPPI BELLINI by name—is at this moment in Paris. ALEX. DUMAS has written for him a libretto for an opera comique in one act.

DICE TINTO.

A RETURNED LIBERIAN.—THOMAS CRESTER, Esq., a colored native of Harrisburg, who has been residing in Liberia for the last eighteen months, called on us yesterday. He bears with him a certificate, under the broad seal, that he is an Attorney-at-Law, in good standing, &c. He has in his possession many curiosities and samples of minerals, and has enjoyed excellent health. He speaks very favorably of the country and its advantages, and intends returning in a short time.—Harrisburg Herald.

☞ The Cleveland fire was greatly exaggerated. The total loss at first was telegraphically put down at a million of dollars, whereas we now learn by mail, that the actual damage does not exceed $383,600: insurance on buildings, $92,500; on goods, $191,000.

WISCONSIN.

The Lead Region—Lead and Iron Ore—Railroads, &c.

[Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.]

WAUKESHA, Friday, Oct. 13, 1854.

DEAR SIR: I am here, amid Indian trails and the monuments of that sad and rapidly vanishing race, who once rallied here around their altar-fires and worshipped the Great Spirit. None gather now, not even to weep, like the fallen Jews, over the memorials of their former greatness. They are gone, faded before the advancing light of civilization; but their footprints and the mounds reared in the dim and shadowy past, and like the pyramids of Egypt, mysterious as to their origin or design, still remain. We have wandered over them, conjectured and wondered, and even explored their deeps and exhumed their buried relics; still they are a mystery—a venerated link between the olden time and the present. We leave them to the antiquarian and the philosopher, and proceed to speak of other matters more obvious and important. We have not the leisure nor the facilities, simply as a traveler, however keen or discriminating may be our observations, to do full and ample justice to this emphatically great and growing State—great, literally in extent—great in its mineral and agricultural wealth—great in its prospective commercial advantages—and great in its means and adaptations for the education of the young and rising generation.

The Lead region of Wisconsin includes an area of nearly 3,500 square miles, extending from East to West about seventy miles, and in width, from North to South, some fifty miles. Without attempting any geological analysis, I may safely say from what I have seen and know, that the Lead Mines of Wisconsin are not inferior in richness or extent to those of any other State, and must, when vigorously worked, be a source of vast and permanent wealth. Zinc ores are also found in large quantities in the vicinity of the Lead district. Every ton of this ore will yield from 1,400 1,600 pounds of pure white oxide. This can be sold on the ground for $120 per ton. The cost of the ore and manufacture, we are informed, would not exceed $60 per ton, leaving a clear profit of $70 upon every ton of oxide manufactured. A factory producing ten tons of oxide per day would thus yield to its owners a net annual profit of $210,000. Thus you have some idea of the wealth of the State from this source. Dodge and Washington Counties especially are rich in Iron. I speak from what I have seen, when I say that the ore is literally inexhaustible, easily obtained, and will yield from 50 to 60 per cent. The Northwestern Iron Company is now working this ore at Mayville, and producing a very superior quality of pig Iron, which costs them at the furnace, including all expenditures, not over $12 per ton, which is readily sold in market at $40. Iron can be wrought at this furnace probably cheaper than at any other similar establishment in the world. And when the LaCrosse and Milwaukee Railroad shall be completed to this place, the facilities of this Company for transportation will be as great as could be desired. This Company is still in its infancy, having only been in active operation some six months, but its success is no longer problematical, and it will soon be able to pay a large dividend. Its President, J. L. BEAN, Esq., of this village, is a practical iron man in more senses than one, and in his hands the Company will reap large results. Had I money to invest I know of nothing in the West that promises richer than this. The Washington Company have been organized, with BYRON KILLBOURN, the present Mayor of Milwaukee, as their President, and have purchased an adjoining track equally rich in ore, and expect next season to have their furnaces in full blast. But I must not dwell upon the mineral wealth of this State so long, as your readers will be far more interested to know what are the results of the wheat, the potatoes, and the corn crops. Wisconsin has thoroughly vindicated her reputation and her capabilities as a wheat-growing country, the harvest for the past two years yielding, on an average, more than 25 bushels per acre. They have not suffered at all from the drouth, and crops of every description are full and plenty, and farmers are looking forward to a bright and golden future. The Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad, now completed as far as Madison, doing a large and lucrative business, the La Crosse and Milwaukee Road, and others in process of construction, will greatly add to the present and prospective wealth of the State. The farmers have enlisted with a noble zeal and with most effective energy in the manufacture of their roads. If they have not the ready money to invest in stock, they mortgage their farms to the amount of half their estimated value. These mortgages are taken to the East and sold as collateral security, and thus money is obtained for carrying forward the roads. Now observe the validity of these securities—the Railroad Company first give their bond, then the bond and mortgage of the farmer as collateral, thus giving virtually a three-fold security. We have conversed with many of the farmers who have thus mortgaged their farms, and we find them in good heart and hope, expecting to realize a good per centage on their stock as well as a large increase to the value of their farms by the completion of the roads. When these roads are all completed, as they certainly will be, Wisconsin, with all its mineral and agricultural wealth, is brought into near proximity to New-York. By taking the People's Line of Steamboats, or the Hudson River Railroad, and then the Great Central Railway through Canada, (undoubtedly one of the best built, as well as the best managed roads in this country,) you reach Chicago, this growing Metropolis of the West, in less than 36 hours. Then a few hours' sail brings you to Milwaukee, a fine and flourishing city; and when the roads now in progress are completed to the Mississippi River, you have facilities for reaching at an easy and rapid rate, all the great points of interest of the Great West. I had intended to speak of the ample means and adaptations for education as afforded by the State and General Governments, but I have already transcended my limits. The Presbyterian and Congregational General Convention meets in a few days at Fond Du Lac, and you may anticipate a brief report of its proceedings.

Yours truly, S. D. B.

LATER FROM HAVANA.

Arrival of the Black Warrior—Summary of Intelligence.

The steamer Black Warrior, from Havana, Oct 28, arrived yesterday morning. It was rumored there that the Spanish fleet were about to cruise along our coast, for purposes of observation. The following from our correspondent gives all the intelligence of any interest by this arrival:

HAVANA, Saturday, Oct. 28 1854.

The steamer reported in my last as entered at this port was the Empire City, from New-Orleans, in place of the Isabel, for Charleston. The last steamer broke her shaft near Cape Florida, at 6½ o'clock P. M. the 21st inst. Suffered no other damage. Her passengers, seventy-one in number, including New-York passengers, arrived here on the 24th on board of the schooners Florida and Little Shepherd, which delivered also the mails of the Isabel. The Isabel got into Key West with sail and steam, using one wheel, on the morning of the 23d, and will from thence be compelled to return to Charleston in the same way, which will cause a months' loss of time before she can again be put on the route.

Orders for the institution of a country police corps, to be put on a military footing, and to be paid for directly by the people, were issued on the 14th.

It is proposed by the Captain-General to erect a Hospital for the protection of the orphan children of the colored and African part of our population, to be built out of the surplus funds derived from the "Emancipados."

The British West India mail steamer Lawyer arrived 24th, from St. Thomas, bringing mails and passengers from Southampton. Her dates were anticipated by arrivals from the United States. She left on the evening of the 25th for Vera Cruz and Tampico. Passengers for Havana, 17; and for Vera Cruz, 28.

The steamer Falcon got off on the 26th, A. M., for Aspinwall, having been detained for want of firemen and crew, which were partially supplied here, but with much difficulty and expense. The statement of taking a man on board last trip, as made by the Government, was denied by the Captain. As he was getting off from the mail wharf, he took on board a man necessarily left there to let go the hawser, which could not be a violation of the port regulations.

The last steamer from New-York (Philadelphia) brought very few papers and not more than a half dozen numbers of the TIMES, which were looked for on account of the Arctic and Sebastopol intelligence. One number of issue 17th only found, after the officers of the Government had been supplied.

The Spanish ship of the line Soberano, was towed into the harbor of Cuba on the 16th inst., and it is said may be refitted at that point, after the necessary spars are obtained from the United States.

The Falcon left in the American Hospital "San Francisco" nineteen sailors and firemen. Two have since died—WM. CARON and JOHN CONN. A fireman by the name of MICHAEL MCCARRELL died at sea on the way up. The Falcon shipped here last trip fifteen hands, of all sorts and foreigners—all that could be obtained.

It is supposed that the late great military demonstration will leave the fleets of France and England, at leisure to attend to Yankee interests on this side—the Spanish sentiment, "up stairs," in a rejoicing Junta-night of the 23d inst. I suppose Mr. PIERCE will be "all ready" for action.

Business has not been very active the past week, but I refer you for particulars to the enclosed statement. The health of Havana remains good—the crops as last advised, and produce of the United States in fair demand, at a slight decline in prices for provisions.

CITY CONTRACTS.

The City Supplies of Stationery—Letter from the Contractors.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

DEAR SIR: I am here, amid Indian trails and the monuments of that sad and rapidly vanishing race, who once rallied here around their altar-fires and worshipped the Great Spirit. None gather now, not even to weep, like the fallen Jews, over the memorials of their former greatness. They are gone, faded before the advancing light of civilization; but their footprints and the mounds reared in the dim and shadowy past, and like the pyramids of Egypt, mysterious as to their origin or design, still remain. We have wandered over them, conjectured and wondered, and even explored their deeps and exhumed their buried relics; still they are a mystery—a venerated link between the olden time and the present. We leave them to the antiquarian and the philosopher, and proceed to speak of other matters more obvious and important. We have not the leisure nor the facilities, simply as a traveler, however keen or discriminating may be our observations, to do full and ample justice to this emphatically great and growing State—great, literally in extent—great in its mineral and agricultural wealth—great in its prospective commercial advantages—and great in its means and adaptations for the education of the young and rising generation.

The Lead region of Wisconsin includes an area of nearly 3,500 square miles, extending from East to West about seventy miles, and in width, from North to South, some fifty miles. Without attempting any geological analysis, I may safely say from what I have seen and know, that the Lead Mines of Wisconsin are not inferior in richness or extent to those of any other State, and must, when vigorously worked, be a source of vast and permanent wealth. Zinc ores are also found in large quantities in the vicinity of the Lead district. Every ton of this ore will yield from 1,400 1,600 pounds of pure white oxide. This can be sold on the ground for $120 per ton. The cost of the ore and manufacture, we are informed, would not exceed $60 per ton, leaving a clear profit of $70 upon every ton of oxide manufactured. A factory producing ten tons of oxide per day would thus yield to its owners a net annual profit of $210,000. Thus you have some idea of the wealth of the State from this source. Dodge and Washington Counties especially are rich in Iron. I speak from what I have seen, when I say that the ore is literally inexhaustible, easily obtained, and will yield from 50 to 60 per cent. The Northwestern Iron Company is now working this ore at Mayville, and producing a very superior quality of pig Iron, which costs them at the furnace, including all expenditures, not over $12 per ton, which is readily sold in market at $40. Iron can be wrought at this furnace probably cheaper than at any other similar establishment in the world. And when the LaCrosse and Milwaukee Railroad shall be completed to this place, the facilities of this Company for transportation will be as great as could be desired. This Company is still in its infancy, having only been in active operation some six months, but its success is no longer problematical, and it will soon be able to pay a large dividend. Its President, J. L. BEAN, Esq., of this village, is a practical iron man in more senses than one, and in his hands the Company will reap large results. Had I money to invest I know of nothing in the West that promises richer than this. The Washington Company have been organized, with BYRON KILLBOURN, the present Mayor of Milwaukee, as their President, and have purchased an adjoining track equally rich in ore, and expect next season to have their furnaces in full blast. But I must not dwell upon the mineral wealth of this State so long, as your readers will be far more interested to know what are the results of the wheat, the potatoes, and the corn crops. Wisconsin has thoroughly vindicated her reputation and her capabilities as a wheat-growing country, the harvest for the past two years yielding, on an average, more than 25 bushels per acre. They have not suffered at all from the drouth, and crops of every description are full and plenty, and farmers are looking forward to a bright and golden future. The Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad, now completed as far as Madison, doing a large and lucrative business, the La Crosse and Milwaukee Road, and others in process of construction, will greatly add to the present and prospective wealth of the State. The farmers have enlisted with a noble zeal and with most effective energy in the manufacture of their roads. If they have not the ready money to invest in stock, they mortgage their farms to the amount of half their estimated value. These mortgages are taken to the East and sold as collateral security, and thus money is obtained for carrying forward the roads. Now observe the validity of these securities—the Railroad Company first give their bond, then the bond and mortgage of the farmer as collateral, thus giving virtually a three-fold security. We have conversed with many of the farmers who have thus mortgaged their farms, and we find them in good heart and hope, expecting to realize a good per centage on their stock as well as a large increase to the value of their farms by the completion of the roads. When these roads are all completed, as they certainly will be, Wisconsin, with all its mineral and agricultural wealth, is brought into near proximity to New-York. By taking the People's Line of Steamboats, or the Hudson River Railroad, and then the Great Central Railway through Canada, (undoubtedly one of the best built, as well as the best managed roads in this country,) you reach Chicago, this growing Metropolis of the West, in less than 36 hours. Then a few hours' sail brings you to Milwaukee, a fine and flourishing city; and when the roads now in progress are completed to the Mississippi River, you have facilities for reaching at an easy and rapid rate, all the great points of interest of the Great West. I had intended to speak of the ample means and adaptations for education as afforded by the State and General Governments, but I have already transcended my limits. The Presbyterian and Congregational General Convention meets in a few days at Fond Du Lac, and you may anticipate a brief report of its proceedings.

Yours truly, S. D. B.

LATER FROM HAVANA.

Arrival of the Black Warrior—Summary of Intelligence.

The steamer Black Warrior, from Havana, Oct 28, arrived yesterday morning. It was rumored there that the Spanish fleet were about to cruise along our coast, for purposes of observation. The following from our correspondent gives all the intelligence of any interest by this arrival:

HAVANA, Saturday, Oct. 28 1854.

The steamer reported in my last as entered at this port was the Empire City, from New-Orleans, in place of the Isabel, for Charleston. The last steamer broke her shaft near Cape Florida, at 6½ o'clock P. M. the 21st inst. Suffered no other damage. Her passengers, seventy-one in number, including New-York passengers, arrived here on the 24th on board of the schooners Florida and Little Shepherd, which delivered also the mails of the Isabel. The Isabel got into Key West with sail and steam, using one wheel, on the morning of the 23d, and will from thence be compelled to return to Charleston in the same way, which will cause a months' loss of time before she can again be put on the route.

Orders for the institution of a country police corps, to be put on a military footing, and to be paid for directly by the people, were issued on the 14th.

It is proposed by the Captain-General to erect a Hospital for the protection of the orphan children of the colored and African part of our population, to be built out of the surplus funds derived from the "Emancipados."

The British West India mail steamer Lawyer arrived 24th, from St. Thomas, bringing mails and passengers from Southampton. Her dates were anticipated by arrivals from the United States. She left on the evening of the 25th for Vera Cruz and Tampico. Passengers for Havana, 17; and for Vera Cruz, 28.

The steamer Falcon got off on the 26th, A. M.,

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

THE NEWSBOY. New-York: J. C. DERBY. 12mo. pp. [illegible]

Here is a "taking" title, surely. If the writer tells his true story, it will not look modern. Every body has a respect for the newsboy, for he is a man of business, though perhaps of a tender age. Nobody is afraid of his contact, ragged as he is. We know that, ignorant as he may be of what we know, he is wise in matters of which we are profoundly ignorant. We know how and where other folks live. A street-sweeper we have seen traced to his home. We have had frequent glimpses of the private life of the rag-picker. The "boys" we know all about. The lamplighter, the artisan, the literary man has had exposed his inner life; but the newsboy, where does he live? We know where he "hunks," but where is the place he speaks of as his home? Where is his sister, brother, mother, friend—everybody must have one—where does that one live? When we stumble over him lying on the grating where the steam from the cellars comes up in clouds, we can't believe that this is his "residence,"—it must be his "dissipation," not his daily experience we have had a glimpse of.

If the writer tells the truth, and tells it well, the Newsboy, will be a readable book. It is a simple straightforward, plainly-told story. There is not much affectation about it. There is not much moralizing in it—a little occasionally, but so little that the reader will hardly find it worth while to skip it.

Little Bob's folks were very poor, and they died. He comes out upon the pavement homeless, so young that he only recognizes definitely one want—somebody to kick and cuff him and throw him a crust occasionally. He sees in the face of "Sam," an old newsboy passing by, something that promises what no one's else does,—a grain of practical sympathy. So he lays hold on Sam's coat-tail and won't be shaken off. Sam's efforts to be free are unsuccessful, and at last coming to blows, Bob wins the admiration of the circle by giving back the blows so heartily, that the boys pronounce him "broke in," and Sam takes him as a 'prentice. Bob waxes stout and hearty, makes a good salesman, seldom gets stuck, is generous and jolly, and altogether a favorite among them. He goes to the "National" nights, eats peanuts, wears the uniform of his craft and is dirty as the dirtiest. But "Sam" gets in love, and to the disgust of his mates marries. By degrees, the boys take him back into their affections, however, and when he and his wife die, they saint them and deposit their remains tearfully in Greenwood.

Bob grows sober, and tries to "understand things." He is never able to see one in distress, but he feels badly if he does not help him. He takes in, one after the other, two little girls, mere babies that are left outcasts in his path;—one a little "Broken-back," who dies early and is his guardian angel, the other "Dady," who proves to be the come-by-chance of his old friend "Fishy Jack" and Maggie of the Five Points. To keep them safe, he has to keep house. But he pays no rent, for his house is the wreck of an old car left in a vacant lot up town. And to guard his little folks, he coaxes the "Little apple woman" to come and make it her home. Bob is ignorant, even beyond the measure generally admitted of newsboy ignorance, about heaven or God, right or duty. Seeking light, he visits Trinity Church and the Broadway Theatre. Only a ray reaches his heart, however,—it is the sentiment that Love is right and Hate wrong.

Bob comes several times across a little girl who lives in the house opposite his car. She is the daughter of a merchant, and is secretly forced away from home by a Cuban, who had been the merchant's rival in college. Bob's efforts to recover the girl recommend him to the merchant, who takes him and his Dady into his house; the apple-woman turns back to the steps of Stewart's to her trading, and "Broken back" is buried. Bob goes out as an agent for the merchant to Cuba, brings home the lost daughter, but does not hang himself, though she declines to be his wife when he asks it. Bob is a partner with the merchant, and though abroad when the book was written, is probably in town by this time, and we presume advertises in the TIMES.

The book has faults, though pardonable ones. Bob is true, commendably, to nature, until Sam dies. But after that he is altogether too noble a fellow to live in our whereabouts. PLATO, if he had been a newsboy, would not have been wiser than he in his ignorance, nor a son of the angels better, barring his rough way. He is of the Natty Bumpo family—a very loveable but very scarce breed. Aunt Beekey is an excellent New-England old maid, and only overdrawn when she writes to her dear pastor. If the novel is dramatized, whoever played Miss Ophelia, of Uncle Tom's Cabin, should play Aunt Beeky. The merchant is well drawn, and a faithful representative of a class—probably not a large one indeed.

But, find all the fault we can, The Newsboy, is a good book. Its moral is wholesome. The drift it gives one's thoughts is desirable. Its lesson is good. After reading it we feel impelled to pay the street-sweeper the penny she earns at the crossing—to honor every worker in however humble a field. It deserves the circulation it is likely to enjoy.

The Ball of M. H. G., of Jersey City—Note from Rev. Mr. Kelly.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The article regarding this affair, which appears to-day in the TIMES, under the caption of "Altar Denunciations," misrepresents the sermon of Rev. J. M. HOELINGER, and is unjust towards that learned and excellent clergyman, as well as to myself. If garbling and distorting, together with reporting sentences never uttered by that gentleman nor me, might be considered revenge, then indeed the orators of the ball have taken satisfaction for all the offences supposed to be committed against their party.

Rev. Mr. H., on Sunday last, previously to the ball, preached on the tendencies and immoral consequences of balls. He exhorted his hearers, as I did, at another service, to shun such assemblies, and added that the speeches which such gentlemen as the editor of the Citizen, would probably make at the supper, would be of such a character, most likely, that a Christian should not listen to them. He warned young men against joining in the revolutionary and unconstitutional agitation in this country of Messrs. DOHENY, MITCHEL, and MEAGHER, showing that it could not be participated in without a violation of the laws of the United States, and at the same time incurring the guilt of mortal sin.

Whilst American orators, the BEECHERS, the CHEEVERS, &c., were denouncing doctrines, and men, and their principles, where was the scourge of Mr. DUFFY? Why did he not then, too, issue from his cellar, to slander them as he does my "relative," and tell the Abolitionist, the Anti-Romanist, &c., that the custom of what he terms "altar denunciations," prevailed only in Ireland a long time ago—that it is an importation from "half educated" barbarians of his own native island? If it is not an Irish ball, it is a great discovery.

J. KELLY.

Wolff Brothers's Wood-Gas Patent Case.

The public has witnessed in this City and in Philadelphia, the successful results of a newly invented process, (welcomed at its publication, April, 1851, by the scientifical world,) and of a newly invented apparatus, ingeniously constructed for this particular process, both for making illuminating gas from wood.

The same results led a few years since, to the introduction of this Bavarian invention in some cities in Germany, and the first patent was already issued by the Bavarian Government, under date February 24, 1851, of which an authenticated copy, with specification, has been filed in the United States Patent-Office. The laws of the United States unconstitutionally prohibit granting patents to anybody, other than to the original inventor, or his assignee of such inventions as are already patented in this or any foreign country. It may be also stated, that EMIL BERNARDI, the assignee, has duly filed, a year ago, PETTENKOFER & BULANDO' claim, as the sole and original inventors of the aforesaid process and apparatus, for wood-gas making in the United States Patent-Office, in regard of their rights against invasion. If, now, the undersigned, the duly appointed, measure-men, have been recently employed and paid, in violation of the patent rights of the original Bavarian inventors, the party interested will, of course, prosecute the violators, by all the legal means which are provided by the laws of this country for such cases. This I notify to all persons who take an interest in the introduction of this useful invention in the United States.

THE SLAVE TRADE.

Slavery to be Revoked by the Reconvention of the African Slave Trade.

From the Charleston (S. C.) Mercury, Oct. 31.

The Slave Trade has been a blessing, both to Africa and America. Why may it not still go on civilizing the savage, and developing the resources of a splendid region? Why should the law of nations, under the plea of humanity, affix the severest penalties and the blackest stigma to a traffic which has accomplished so much in behalf of humanity? Why should this Government adhere to a policy which excludes from vast and fertile regions the only labor suited to them? And, lastly, why should the South, and Southern statesmen, so mince the truth, and weaken the cause of Slavery, by uniting with fanatics and rivals, against that which has been the source of her present, and must be, as we will now attempt to show, of her future prosperity, if not existence? Labor is the great want of a new country. It is the only key to treasures, which, unlocked, lie useless and wasted. Nowhere is this more apparent than in the South. Traveling in any direction, broad uncultivated lands and beds of mineral wealth, still unopened, lie before you. Settlement and cultivation mark only the most fertile spots. In South Carolina, one of the oldest States, thousands upon thousands of acres of surpassing richness stretch along her rivers, crowned with the unshorn forest. You feel as you ride upon her railroads, or penetrate into regions more remote, that there is still so much to be done, before Nature's bounties can be enjoyed in their fullness, or earth be gleaned of the fruits it offers now in vain. These remarks have a much stronger application to the newer States of the South. Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Texas, exhibit this want of labor in far more startling degrees. Indeed, with all her wealth and productions, the South has realized but a little of the prosperity which is not only possible, but actually certain, could she only satisfy this one great want.

But it is not for the cultivation of soil, and the increase of wealth merely, that labor is not so much needed by the South. There are reasons apart from the necessities of a new country—reasons which, being peculiar in their nature and importance, must not be lost sight of. The South is not only engaged in the universal rivalry of old and new nations, but her institutions, upon which rests the whole structure of her civilization, are assailed by the fiercest fanaticism abroad, combined with the lust of sectional domination at home. With others it is a race of competition—with her it is the war for life. To others, defeat is the loss of the prize only; to her, it brings death. Her hopes, her fame, her existence, are threatened by a crusade, never before marshaled to crush any people; and the names of humanity, and Heaven, are invoked for her ruin and annihilation. Peculiar in habits, civilization and institutions, she is also peculiar in the perils which are daily crowding upon her.

* * * * * * *

Thus imperilled, thus hunted down, thus struggling for life, against fearful odds, there is one obvious resource for the South. Whether she remains in the Union, or, at last, goaded by wrongs and exactions, plants her foot on the rock of separate independence, in either alternative, there remains the same necessity. She cannot go backward nor stand still, while her foes are closing around her. She must go onward with her institutions and civilization. Slavery must spread in area and power. The preponderating power of the Free States, ever on the increase, must be counterbalanced by the addition of Slave States. If the North colonizes for Abolition, the South must colonize for Slavery. The means of defence must multiply with the means of attack.

Now, what elements of colonization does the South possess, in comparison with the North? Will they be found in the natural increase of her Slaves? Why, that is but one hundred thousand annually, while the natural increase of Northern labor is reinforced by five hundred thousand immigrants in the same time. What chance, then, for Southern labor to gain foothold in the Territories which still remain open to its Colonization? The repeal of the Missouri Compromise brings no practical good to the South. It does not practically enable her to establish Slavery in Nebraska or Kansas, for it does not and cannot supply the means of colonization. Indeed, although the repeal of the Missouri Compromise wipes out an odious restriction, it reveals the mortifying fact that the South cannot profit by it. With her meagre supply of labor, Colonization by the South can proceed only by weakening the States already settled. This is even now evident in South Carolina, in the decrease of population in some of her districts, and the abandonment of her lands for newer settlements. So, too, with other States. The tendency is to produce a diffusion of Slavery, which, all agree, is perilous to it. The need is, compact Colonization, which, moving on in solid column, leaves no post in the rear unguarded, but bears along the civilization and empire of the South. Yet this is now an impossibility. Colonization by the South cannot be what it is by the North, the outpouring of surplus population. The former, if it were on a scale to compete successfully with the latter, in the broad fields of the West, would resemble the march of a nomadic people.

The alternative then to the South is, whether she will continue to depend solely upon the natural increase of her slaves, for development and colonization, wholly inadequate as it is for either, or despairing for once and forever the whimsies of fanaticism, she will brush from her path its flimsy obstacles, and demand that the original and true source of her labor shall be no longer closed—that Africa and America shall be free to reciprocate blessings? If when Slavery was deemed an evil, Southern men consented to the abolition of the Slave-Trade, as the precursor of emancipation, will they adhere to the same policy when Slavery is proved to be a blessing—nay the very heart-blood of the South? Are they still advocates of emancipation? Do they not perceive that by such a course they are preparing the way of abolition? Is it worthy of a free people to consent to absolute restrictions upon their legitimate progress, when progress is to them, more than to all others, the very necessity of their existence? Shall the North be permitted to supply her demand for labor, wherewith to usurp the common territories, and abolitionize the Government by an emigration, attended with all the horrors of the Slave-Trade, while the South is tied hand and foot? Will she perpetuate a policy which stigmatizes her civilization, betrays her cause into the silliest inconsistencies, and tends to her complete annihilation? Will she permit her vast and splendid resources to be wasted, because fanaticism and political rivalry demand the sacrifice?

STRANGE DEVELOPMENTS.—A singular case and some strange developments were made known to Justice PARSONS yesterday afternoon. The accused and the accuser are supposed to be brothers. The facts are simply these, as related by the Express. For some two months or so past, a firm under the title of "WELLS, MARTIN, Brothers," have been keeping store for the sale of dried and smoked fish, No. 237 Bowery. Yesterday morning one of them came to the Police Office, gave his name as LEWIS WELLS, and charged that LEWIS MARTIN, another of the partners, had the night previously sent down to New-York on the steamer Hero, a box of silks, &c., which had been stolen, and that in each box there were two violins belonging to him. A warrant was thereupon issued, and officers WHALEN and GERMAN proceeded to the Bowery and arrested MARTIN. On being brought to the Police Office, he stated that WELLS, the complainant, was his own brother. This the latter strenuously denied, stating that MARTIN was an escaped convict from the Massachusetts State Prison, and that he had been guilty of any number of thefts here, and in Boston and New-York. The above officers were dispatched to search the premises, where they found the two violins claimed by WELLS, also a wig, two skeleton keys, and a beautiful silk crimson shawl. MARTIN was committed for a further examination, and there the matter at present stands. Both the parties are Englishmen and look enough alike to pass for brothers. MARTIN is married and keeps house at the above place.—Albany Journal, Nov. 1.

FATAL COLLISION.—We understand that a fatal collision took place on the Pennsylvania Railroad a few days since. It occurred near the big viaduct, at the intersection of the old Portage, in consequence of the misplacing of a switch; and the result was three men killed and one

POLITICAL INTELLIGENCE.

Fifth Congressional District.

Having received a bold and independent petition from the public to nominate to a nomination for Congress, I publicly had two certain parties into the proper to take advantage of that position to promote their own ends, and in compliance relatively again to appear in print.

On Wednesday evening last, three weeks after I had been unanimously nominated as the Whig candidate for the Fifth Congressional District, two gentlemen called upon me and stated that they appeared on behalf of a meeting of "Citizens," to present some documents in regard to the nominating convention. I asked to see their credentials, and they submitted a paper stating that they were appointed at a meeting of "Citizens," held at a certain time and place. On my requesting a copy of the call of the meeting the gentlemen could not supply it, but admitted that it had been published; and stated that their purpose was "to submit documents in their hands going to prove the illegality of the Convention which nominated me. I told them frankly that it was out of the question for me, when the election was but four (working) days off, to go into such an examination at the request of any one, or even half a dozen Citizens; but that if they would furnish a copy of the call of the meeting alleged to have been held, I could judge of its character, and would promptly give my answer in writing. The gentlemen promised, if possible, to comply with my request, but doubted their ability, and withdrew.

From another quarter I have obtained a copy of this call, which is as follows:

TO O. U. A.—The members of the Order living in the 7th and 12th Wards of this City, and also those living in Williamsburg, are earnestly requested to attend a meeting of the Order on TUESDAY EVENING next, the 24th inst., at Odd Fellow's Hall, No. 405 Grand st., New-York. Come one, come all. By order of the P. W. M. E. VAN ULZY, Secretary.

I have not yet learned that O. U. A. spells WHIG, and the men managing this machinery seem have really underrated my capacity if they dreamed that I would fall into this trap,—covered as it may be by verdant, very verdant branches. However honest he might be, a man who could put his foot into such a trap as that, would not possess intelligence enough to represent the Fifth Congressional District.

The facts are these: On the 5th of October the delegates which nominated me were chosen. No complaint was then made to the General Committee, the proper tribunal. On the 12th of October I was unanimously nominated, and on the 1st of November, three weeks afterwards, I was asked by a Committee appointed under the above call to investigate the legality of the Convention which nominated me! This Committee nurse the job eight days, and then allow me and the Whigs of the District four days before the election to conduct a difficult and intricate investigation. Did these gentlemen, because I had in a previous letter assured the public that I was not a political knave, take me to be a political fool? Surely they so thought, and surely they are mistaken.

Finally: I do not recognize the right of any society, embracing within its membership Nebraska Democrats, to decide the legality of Whig Conventions.

I do not attach extreme importance to a regular nomination, and had a single citizen, ten days ago, furnished any evidence of the illegality of the Convention, I would have cast aside the nomination, and proposed to the gentlemen who now claim to be a "regular" nominee, to stump the District, meeting the PEOPLE face to face, and discussing the great issues of the day, of which I regard Anti-Nebraska as the chief.

I did not beg or buy the nomination, and I defy any man to prove the least complicity on my part in anything dishonorable. And I ask the public to bear in mind that whatever may be hereafter alleged against the Nominating Committee is ex parte, and has been concocted in secret by the leaders of a Society who seem to be afflicted with an insatiable thirst for office.

I shall not decline, or even hesitate in my course, but shall submit to the judgment of the people, relying not so much upon the endorsement of a Convention as upon a life-time spent among the people of the District.

If the PEOPLE do not like such candid avowals, it will not grieve me; if they choose me on such terms, I shall be theirs, Faithfully,

GEORGE H. ANDREWS.

NOVEMBER 2, 1854.

Letter from Peter Cooper.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Having been called by my fellow-citizens to preside over the deliberations of gentlemen united together to do what they could to stay the torrent of political corruption, that has so effectually undermined the morals of so many of our community, that people have too generally come to look upon political intrigues and their evils with comparative indifference and unconcern:

Deeply impressed with a sense of my own insufficiency for the place that I have been called to fill, and of the solemn responsibility that rests upon every citizen to unite in efforts to secure to labor its proper reward by the administration of justice for the welfare and protection of all; this can only be done by rewarding men of honesty and capacity, with our continued confidence and support. In addition to all the arguments and appeals that have been adopted and sent forth by the Reform Committee, I venture in my individual capacity to recommend for your support

For Mayor—WILLIAM G. HUNT.
For Surrogate—ALEXANDER W. BRADFORD.
For Recorder—FRANCIS R. TILLOU.
For City Judge—WELCOME R. BEEBE.
For Register—GEORGE IRELAND, Jr.
For Commissioner of Streets and Lamps—SYLVANUS GERDEY.
For Governor of the Almshouse—DANIEL F. TIEMANN.
For District Attorney—A. OAKEY HALL.

I beg leave to assure my fellow-citizens that the gentlemen with whom I have had the honor to act, have shown a self-sacrificing disposition to a degree that is not often found in so large a body of men. This was in evidence by the fact that, after canvassing the merits of names offered by each individual, a unanimous vote was obtained for all the candidates but one that the Reform Committee have presented for your support.

I trust our efforts to call and fix the attention of every good citizen on the necessity and propriety of discarding every other consideration but the honesty and capacity of the various candidates that have been offered, will be appreciated, and made manifest by your votes.

As the opportunity for me to do anything to advance the substantial interests and honor of my native City must, in the nature of things, soon come to a close, I desire that the good work that has been done by the noble ministry of Reformers who were last elected to the Councils of our City, may be continued.

By them your taxes have been lessened more than a million of dollars from what they would otherwise have been. Your streets are cleaner; your police have been greatly improved; and your Schools, which provide education for all, have arrived at a degree of excellence that promises well for the future of our country.

Shall this good work that has been commenced be continued? Or will you allow the evils to remain and grow "UNTIL THEY BECOME THORNS IN OUR EYES, AND THORNS IN OUR SIDES TO VEX US IN THE LAND WHEREIN WE DWELL."

The Address of the Reform Committee points out the kind of machinery, in the shape of Primary Elections, by which unworthy men have been able to secure office, with power to tax, oppress and demoralize the community, to an extent calculated to make the philanthropic heart cry out, in the language of one of old, "O, that mine head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears," that I might weep over the misery and degradation consequent on the abuse of those high privileges that have fallen to our lot.

It becomes us, fellow-citizens, to remember the world-wide importance of the novel experiment of our Federal Government, on which we believe our own and the happiness of the world is so much dependent. Nothing can save to us the blessings of this glorious Union of States, and the local Government of our choice, but a continued and united effort to place men in office for their honesty, capacity, and intelligence; for we may rest assured that when the wicked bear rule the people will have cause to mourn. PETER COOPER.

The Practical Democrats—Note from E. A. Stansbury, Esq.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Nov. 2, 1854.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your paper of a day or two since, I observed my name mentioned, as a Candidate of the "Practical Democrats," for City Judge. I had previously seen, in the Herald, the report of a meeting of that party, where it appeared that a person with my surname and initials had been nominated for the same office.

Presuming, as the Directory propose me to do, that I am the person intended, I have this to say: that I never knew until very lately of the existence of a party calling themselves "Practical Democrats"—never met with them nor was invited to do so, and never had the least idea, until I saw, in this morning's Courier and Enquirer, the correspondence with Mr. SANDERS, what was the platform on which they stood.

Passing over what they will excuse me for calling the rather free use of my name, I beg to assure them that I am duly sensible of their partiality in selecting me for their nominee, but that I do not aspire to that or any other official position, and must therefore unconditionally decline the nomination.

I shall go, with all my heart, for the Reform Candidates, and if my voice would influence a vote among them, I would earnestly exhort the "Practical Democrats," one and all, to address themselves to the same good work. I know of nothing more practical, nothing more urgently needed in our good City, at this time, than the reorganization of the Municipal Government to something like the condition it was in when built up by those in the exhortation of their fellow-citizens and servants.

The simple result in connection with the calling that first could give me more faith, than the honor of so excellent a man, was to triumphantly a Magistrate as Judge BEEBE, by the loss of a few votes thrown away upon myself. EDWARD A. STANSBURY,

No. 140 Broadway.

Address of the Temperance State Central Committee.

To the friends of Temperance in the State of New-York:

FELLOW CITIZENS: On the 7th of November, a question more grave in its consequences to the dearest present and future interests of tens of thousands of the people of this State, than any that has ever before arrested the public attention, is to be decided at the ballot-box. It is this: Shall the Traffic in intoxicating beverages be prohibited by Law?

Consider these facts, all of which have been established by the most indubitable testimony:

1. That traffic has converted eighty thousand of the present inhabitants of this State once sober and respectable, into drunkards.

2. It has brought sorrow and poverty, and in many instances ruin and despair, to tens of thousands of once happy homes.

3. It causes the incarceration, in the jails and penitentiaries of our State, of fifty thousand of our fellow-citizens annually.

4. From its influence proceed four-fifths of all the crimes, from the least that is recognized by law, to the most flagitious that come under the cognizance of our Courts.

5. Since the first of last January, it has occasioned no less than fifty homicides within the limits of our State, and almost innumerable assaults with intent to kill, happily unsuccessful.

6. It is the fruitful cause of immorality, irreligion, profanity, obscenity, blasphemy, contempt of law, contempt of all the proprieties amenities and decencies of life, and of every evil word and work.

7. It costs the State eighty millions of dollars annually.

8. It destroys the lives of not less than fifteen thousand of our citizens, every twelve months.

Consider these principles universally conceded as true:

1. The interests of health, are superior to those of property. "The health of the people is the supreme law."

2. The interests of morality over-ride those of property.

3. The personal security of the citizen from assault and outrage, is of more consequence than the rights of property.

4. The interests of the many must not be sacrificed to those of the few.

5. The right of the people to protect themselves, through the institutions of government, is inherent and indefeasible; and Government, in the very nature of the case, is clothed with all the powers requisite to the accomplishment of this end—the protection of the people.

From the facts and principles thus stated, the following inferences are unavoidable:

1. The liquor traffic is practically hostile to all the interests of Society which the Civil Power is ordained to protect.

2. The suppression of that traffic is clearly demanded by the purpose for which Government was ordained, and is therefore clearly within the limit of its constitutional powers.

3. The traffic, and not its suppression, is unconstitutional, and the Government that neglects to prohibit it, is either ignorant of its obligations, or faithless to its trust.

The Constitutionality of prohibition is further proved:

1. By the fact that for twenty years past, it has been recognized in the legislation of the General Government. See Laws of the United States for 1838, Vol. IX., page 193.

2. The Supreme Court of the United States, in full Bench, has declared it so, with no dissenting voice. Chief Justice TANEY says:

"If any State deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, and calculated to produce idleness, vice, or debauchery, I see nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating or restraining the traffic, or prohibiting it altogether, if it thinks proper."

The two antagonist principles—Prohibition and Anti-Prohibition—are represented by the several State Tickets in nomination, and are to be passed upon by the suffrages of the people.

MYRON H. CLARK and HENRY J. RAYMOND (the nominees of the Auburn Temperance Convention for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor) are representatives of the prohibitory principle. A vote for them is a vote against the traffic in those adulterated compounds that madden men and prepare them for the commission of crime,—that destroy health and hurry thousands to a premature grave.

The opposite principle is represented by HORATIO SEYMOUR and GERRIT C. BROWSON. Mr. SEYMOUR vetoed the prohibitory law of our last Legislature, and denounced the idea of prohibition as "not consistent with sound principles of legislation." Mr. BROWSON, though not assailing the principle, yet avows it as his conviction, confirmed by reflection, "that no prohibitory liquor law ought to be passed." These gentlemen occupy substantially the same ground—that of opposition to the great measure demanded for the protection of the people.

A vote for either is a vote against prohibition; and thus, practically, for the indefinite continuance of all the evils incident to the perpetuity of the traffic. Will any temperance man allow mere party preference to control his vote, when it is demanded for the protection of all the great interests of society, imperilled by the liquor traffic? We are unwilling to believe that any will so far forget the claims that God and humanity have upon them, and involve themselves in so grievous a wrong.

But there is still another candidate in the field, for whom the votes of temperance men are urgently solicited. We allude to DANIEL ULLMANN, the candidate of the Secret Order popularly known as "KNOW-Nothings." It is our desire to treat all parties and their candidates with courtesy and respect, a rule from which we feel no inclination to depart in the present instance. But we are bound, by the fealty which we owe to the cause of temperance, to test all by the same principle.

Mr. ULLMANN is a gentleman of considerable ability, and enjoys a good reputation both as a speaker and a writer. About forty-five years of age, his life embraces the whole period included in the rise and progress of the Temperance Reformation. What has he ever said in favor of a law to prohibit the liquor traffic? What has he ever done, at any time, for the advancement of the Temperance cause? Of what Temperance Society or Association, of any name, kind or degree, has he ever been a member, or with which has he ever declared himself, in public or in private, in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic? The true answer to these questions must satisfy all candid minds that Mr. ULLMANN'S antecedents are not such as to entitle him to the suffrages of Temperance men.

But even on the supposition that they are satisfactory, why desert MYRON H. CLARK, who has stood by the Temperance cause in its darkest hour—has devoted to it time, money and influence—and hesitated not, while yet the idea of prohibition was unpopular, to commit himself to it fully and unreservedly, simply because he believed it to be right? To desert such a man at such a crisis would be a virtual betrayal of the interests of prohibition, and a premium, not to a life of devotion to a great principle, but to a life-long indifference—not to say practical opposition, to that principle. Surely, temperance men will not so wrong themselves and the cause they love, as to withdraw their support in the very crisis-hour of that cause, from its recognized champion! We could do no injustice to Mr. ULLMANN, nor shall we call in question the honesty either of the candidate or the party that nominated him.

But we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that the opponents of Temperance received the news of his nomination with undisguised exultation—that since that nomination, the friends of Mr. SEYMOUR have felt, or affected to feel a confidence in his reelection that they did not feel before—and that the practical effect of withdrawing temperance votes from Mr. CLARK to bestow them upon Mr. ULLMANN, is to increase the chance of Mr. SEYMOUR'S election, since the election of Mr. ULLMANN is clearly beyond the limits of the possible. In fact, the only chance of Mr. SEYMOUR'S success, is in the diversion of temperance votes from Mr. CLARK. Knowing this, will the friends of prohibition indirectly contribute to the success of a man and a principle to which they are inflexibly opposed? and indefinitely postpone the triumph which is now within their reach; not only this, but at the same time and by the same means, give advantage to the very interest, to oppose which they would jeopard the success of the prohibitory movement? Surely, they cannot act so unwisely, and lose the substance of what they desire by grasping at a delusive shadow.

We close with a few practical suggestions.

1. Let the brief interval between this and the day of election be filled with earnest labor for the cause of Prohibition. Suffer no friend, no neighbor, to vote in ignorance of the vital issue which the approaching election involves.

2. Let neither indifference, nor an excess of confidence, nor doubt, nor despondency, keep any friend of Prohibition from the polls. We religiously believe that victory is within our reach, and that nothing is required but a strenuous, determined, persistent effort, to reach it.

3. See that every intemperate man within the circle of your influence has an opportunity to vote sober. So voting, he will be more likely to vote for than against Prohibition.

4. Have an ample and timely supply of ballots suited to all classes of temperance men. Remember, the Auburn Convention did not nominate a full ticket. CLARK and RAYMOND are their only nominees. This ticket will probably be filled out according to the different political preferences of temperance men. Let ballots be prepared to satisfy these preferences, so far as the balance of the State ticket is concerned.

5. Look well to members of the Assembly. Vote for no man who is not true to the principles of Prohibition, and run no risks of defeat by a failure to concentrate your votes.

6. Let no independent candidate be nominated, where a friend of P. ability is already in nomination—or if such nomination has already been made, induce the nominee in question to withdraw, for the love he bears the cause, that it may not suffer through a divided temperance vote.

God, by his Providence, beckons us not to conflict merely, but to victory. We have no cause for despondency, but much for hope. Let hope, then, stimulate us to action; and action shall lead us on the long desired triumph, in which humanity shall rejoice, and through which our country's highest interests shall be subserved.

On behalf of the State Temperance Central Committee.

WM. RICHARDSON, Chairman.

ALBANY, Oct. 31, 1854.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Meeting of the Geographical Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Geographical and Statistical Society was held last evening. Hon. GEORGE BANCROFT presided.

A communication was read from R. LACKLAN, Esq., of Toronto, highly complimentary to the Society for the active part it has taken in promoting meteorological research, and recording the rise and fall of the lake waters of the British North American Provinces.

Mr. DISTURNELL said he was sorry to announce to the Society the probable death of one of their members, who was involved, as he had reason to suppose, in the destruction of the Arctic, and whose main object in visiting Europe was to promote the welfare and interests of the Society; and as the bar had taken action in the mater—he alluded to ASHER BENDIOT, Esq.—and begged to submit a resolution of regret and condolence with his family.

Dr. HAWKS and the Chairman were of opinion that, as a certain report of Mr. BENDIOT'S death could not be made to the Society, any action in regard to it would be premature, and that therefore it would be more advisable to delay it. The resolution was laid on the table.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY OF NORTHERN NEW-YORK.

W. H. C. WADDELL, Esq., read the paper of the evening. His subject was the "Physical Geography of Northern New-York."

Mr. WADDELL felt highly honored by laying before that body a document which contained all the interesting features in reference to the Northern portion of the State. It would strike the members of the Society with surprise to find how limited was the knowledge of those portions of our State—that little had been elicited twenty or even ten years ago, (and to many even of the present day,)—to a large portion of the counties of St. Lawrence, Franklin, Herkimer and Hamilton, in connection with portions of Essex, Warren, Lewis and Jefferson, comprising within its area a tract much larger in extent than the whole State of Connecticut, and containing the highest mountains in the State, whose summits ascend above the regions of vegetation, and which have been found to reach the height of 15,000 feet instead of the 3,653 feet, as some of the earliest geographers asserted the highest point to be. Before the Erie and Champlain Canals were opened by the immortal CLINTON, those portions of the State were owned in vast tracts by non-resident owners, but were gradually settled by emigrants, who poured in from Europe. The speaker then proceeded to show the benefits which resulted to commerce, particularly the advantage derived by the West from the opening of those great highways—the Canals, before referred to. To these great projects, so beneficial in other respects, may be attributed the unsettled portion of this State, familiarly known on its northern border as the "Great South Woods," and on its southern margin, as the "Northern Wilderness," in consequence of the tide of emigration being borne on those canals to the promising lands and fertile valleys of the West. That portion of New-York north of the Mohawk Valley might, he said, be considered one of the great natural divisions of the State. It includes ten counties, and has an area of 13,301 square miles, within which, even at the present time, is a dense forest, equal to 5,000 square miles, and is elevated about 1,500 feet above Lake Ontario. Though the Legislature yearly makes appropriations to develop the great natural resources of this region, no inducement can be held out sufficiently strong to tempt the hardy sons of toil to brave the hardships and inconveniences of these wilds. The speaker then entered at great length into the project of the Legislature of 1848, by which great inducements and grants of lands, with a liberal charter, were offered to any company which would undertake to construct a railroad through the wilderness—connecting the Hudson with the Lake by additional bands of iron. He then referred to the surveys and explorations made by A. F. EDWARDS, Esq., and his corps of engineers, who scientifically and beautifully explored the inmost recesses of this region. "From repeated examination," the report states this country only wants communication with the markets to give it rank among the best of agricultural districts. The iron ores of Essex County eclipse even the far-famed iron mountains of Missouri. The great deposit of ore at Adirondack became known to the late DAVID HENDERSON, Esq., of Jersey City, through means of a brave of the St. Francis tribe, who presented him with a piece of Iron Ore, and pointed out where it might be found in abundance. A road was soon constructed to the site, through a dense forest 30 miles in length. The proprietors established a settlement, iron was produced of rare and valuable qualities, rivaling almost in toughness and strength the best products of the Swedish furnace. The speaker mentioned many other valuable and productive mines, among them that of Sanford Hill, from which at a depth of two feet from the surface, the amount of ore which may be raised without power is $6,632,734 tons, which will produce 3,000,000 tons of iron of the best quality, and cannot be worth less than $100 to $120 per ton in the market.

The railroad referred to as the trustee to open this great depository of treasures so long neglected, commences in the County of Saratoga and takes a course almost due north through portions of Essex and Warren Counties, pointing to a connection with the great trunk of railroads which in the Queen's domains are rapidly drawing to a completion—seeming, as it were, in view of the great treaty of reciprocity which is even now passing under the seals of the respective Governments, to be reaching out its iron hands for a more enduring bond with a kindred people—then returning westwardly it enters the deep forest, and winding its way through the myriads of beautiful lakes which lie scattered through that interesting country, emerges into the light of day in the eastern part of Lewis County, and following the Black River unites with the Great Ontario in the naval port of Sackett's Harbor. The western terminus of the road will be at the mouth of the Boreas River, or the western branch of the Hudson, from which a branch road of twelve miles will communicate with a locality where the supply of iron is perfectly exhaustless, and its quality unsurpassed. Iron! the great material to civilize ages—no nation can exist without it. The great Architect has supplied us with nothing which could fill its place, and the State of New-York may, without too great assurance, lay claim, on the score of quality unsurpassed and rarely equaled, and quantity inexhaustible, to supply the world.

The speaker then passed on from the details of figures and results, to enliven his address by vivid descriptions of the Hudson scenery, more especially the pass of the Adirondack, a perpendicular precipice of one thousand feet. This wall extends three-fourths of a mile, and in no place is it less than 500 feet perpendicular. Those who visit the Pass he would recommend not to be satisfied by seeing it from below, but also to view it from above, which may be done by observing due caution.

To convey an idea of the extent of this wilderness, HEADLEY, in a description given of his journeys in 1847-8, says: "It is the same as if the whole country from New-York to Albany, extending also fifty miles on each side of the Hudson, was an unbroken wilderness, crossed by no road, enlivened by no cultivation, not a heel disturbing its waters, while bears, panthers, wolves, moose and deer were the only lords of the soil." Imagine such a country, said the speaker, about the size of Massachusetts and Connecticut put together, most of which has a neglected waste, through which you must make your way with the compass, sustained by what your own skill can secure, and you will obtain a faint conception of the Adirondack region.

In conclusion, the learned speaker thanked the President and audience for the attention with which they listened to his address, and said that this hitherto unknown and valuable district of our State is about being opened, and its great resources brought into use. The Sackett's Harbor and Saratoga Railroad Company, commencing on their eastern route, at the eastern end of the Lake Ontario, passing along the Black River, a continuous line of water power bringing the treasures of the Great West up the gradual ascent of less than 40 feet in the mile, until on the height of land they strike that great chain of lakes alluded to—furnishing an exhaustless supply of woods of every kind—attaching at this point (where the road will commence its descent to the Hudson) a train of cars laden with the beautiful products of the forest, may pass onward toward the Hudson; they will attach another train of those rich ores from the Great Reservoir of Iron which has been reserved for this our day. Finally, he said, it may easily be perceived that these developments must have a great bearing on the character and wealth of our State, especially in no small degree on the City of New-York, and the entire Valley of the Hudson.

At the conclusion of the paper, a vote of thanks was unanimously passed, and the meeting adjourned.

The annual meeting will be held in December, for the election of officers and the transaction of other business.

CITY SCHOOLS.

Meeting of the Board of Education—Important Proceedings.

The Board of Education met on Wednesday evening. The proceedings related to the number of children attending the Schools of the City.

S. S. RANDALL, Esq., City Superintendent, sent in a long communication in answer to the resolutions referred to him by the Board at its last meeting, to report whether it is expedient to have a census taken of all the children in this City of suitable age to attend school, &c. The Superintendent thinks the information referred to is of the utmost importance and value, indispensable, indeed, to the efficient administration of a system of public instruction. Not only the right, but the imperative duty of every civilized community to see that each of its future citizens is properly educated and prepared for the intelligent performance of the various duties incumbent upon him as such, is, at the present day, universally conceded. The aggregate annual expense of our pauper system alone throughout the State, independent of the very ample contributions made by the numerous benevolent and charitable institutions which everywhere abound, exceed one million of dollars, and among the immense and constantly increasing number of the beneficiaries thus provided for by public and private charity, a very small proportion of them have received even an ordinary common school education. The statistics of our criminal convictions show that at least one half of the inmates of our prisons are destitute even of the elementary principles of education, and that of the remaining half not more than four per cent have attended any school, and that not one in two hundred are well educated. Under these circumstances, the Superintendent is of opinion that some measures for the suppression of ignorance are demanded, in justice to the community. Our laws and institutions, he adds, properly require of the means accumulated by industry, probity and thrift, liberal contributions for the education of every child in the community. It is obvious, therefore, that the power exists to render these advantages and blessings practically available by such preventive legislation as shall strike at the foundation of the evils to be guarded against. The duties of the guardians of public education and instruction are but half discharged when they have provided the most ample facilities for the instruction and mental culture of the rising generation. It is incumbent, over and above all this, to adopt the requisite means to bring within their pale every child not otherwise suitably provided for in this respect. It is right to ascertain what proportion of and how many of the children in this great Metropolis are actually deprived of the benefits of elementary instruction, that the requisite steps may be taken to provide them with these benefits in some form. If parents or guardians after having been duly notified, wilfully refuse to furnish their children or wards with suitable facilities for instruction, we have a right to demand that they shall avail themselves of the liberal provisions made in this respect by the Municipal and State authorities. From the census of 1850, it appears that the whole number of children between the ages of five and twenty, then residing in the City, was 150,765, and the whole number attending schools of every description during the preceding year, as returned by the families to which they belonged, 76,685; leaving a balance of 74,080 not in attendance upon any school. Assuming the rate of increase in this portion of the population during the five years succeeding the report referred to to be 25 per cent. only, we shall have in 1855 an aggregate of about 190,000 children of a suitable age to attend school. Of this number, 125,000 only, at most, will be found to have attended the public schools (including evening schools) during any portion of the year, while the regular average attendance will not, it is presumed, amount to 50,000. The whole number of pupils in the several colleges, academies, and other public and private institutions of learning, exclusive of the public schools, will not exceed 15,000; leaving, under the most favorable estimate, 50,000 children not in attendance in any school during any portion of the year—a number equal to the highest average daily attendance upon all our public schools! The Superintendent, therefore, has no hesitation in recommending the adoption of such measures by the Board as shall more effectually secure the accomplishment of the end sought. Through the course to be taken during the ensuing year, under the authority of the State, a mass of valuable information on this subject can be obtained, and the early attention of the Legislature should be directed to its importance and value, as well for future reference as for present value. But the Superintendent adds, that he is deeply impressed with the conviction that some more direct and immediate agency should be brought to bear upon this great evil, and that the Board of Education, as the recognized guardians of the interests of education and public instruction in this great Metropolis, should themselves institute a thorough and comprehensive investigation, not only as to the extent of school accommodations which now exist, or may hereafter become necessary, but the extent to which those accommodations are improved by those for whose benefit they are designed and intended, and especially the extent to which entire non-attendance on any school prevails, and its causes and reasons. He recommends the appointment of one or more special agents, to ascertain these facts. The communication was ordered to be printed.

NO SCHOOL ON SATURDAYS.

A communication from the same source, in answer to a suggestion from a member of the Board, against the expediency of opening the schools on Saturdays, was also received. The communication was ordered to be printed.

SCHOOL-BOOKS AND THEIR AUTHORS.

Commissioner SMITH offered a resolution, and it was adopted, that the Committee on Supplies be requested to report the titles of all books now in use in the schools of which the school officers, teachers, or persons otherwise connected with any school or institution under the charge of this Board, may be the authors, together with the name of every such author; also, in what quantities, and at what prices obtained, and whether any undue consumption of other books of similar description or otherwise, &c., &c.

MONEY WANTED.

The Finance Committee submitted a long report for presentation to the Common Council, asking for an additional appropriation of $198,091 96 for the use of the Board for the remaining three months of the present year. The report sets forth in detail the reasons that render such appropriation necessary, and sets forth fully the laws made and provided in relation thereto. The annexed recapitulation presents the matter in brief:

Amount expended to Oct. 31, 1854	$622,155 23
Estimated expenses from Oct. 31 to Dec. 31, 1854	268,756 23
From which deduct the amount of the school moneys already appropriated for 1854	632,812 50
And there is shown a deficiency of	198,091 96

which is the amount asked from the Common Council.

The report gave rise to some discussion, some of the members contending that the citations of law in the statement were impertinent and unnecessary, but the report was finally adopted without amendment.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

The Board resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on document No. 18—that relating to gradation of teachers' salaries—and, after a brief deliberation, it was referred back to the Committee.

A Lady Balloonist.

A lady was one of a party of four who went skywards yesterday from the Hippodrome. M. GERARD, who has taken up half a hundred times, took the company with him, with life-preservers, valve rope, grappling irons and refreshments, and made a very successful commencement of his trip. The car held four persons very comfortably. The balloon took a northeasterly direction, and when last seen appeared to be hovering over the Sound. It did not rise to any great height, and kept steadily on its course. That occasion excited more than usual interest from the fact that a female was included in the party. Two infant balloons, without any party, went before to prepare the way, and were never heard of. What has been the fortune of the lady and her companions had not transpired last evening.

It is understood that the aeronautic expedition comprised Mr. and Mrs. JOLLY, Mr. PERSCHIERS and Mr. GODARD.

EMIGRANTS.

Meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration.

The proceedings at the meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration on Wednesday evening were interesting. The Committee on Ward's Island made a report in reference to the selection of sites for the two Hospital Buildings to be built. It was resolved that one two story building be erected, according to the plans and specifications now in the office of the Commissioners, under the supervision of the Ward's Island Committee, and the Architect of the Island; and that a three-story and basement building be erected south of the Nursery building, and that plans, &c., be submitted at the next meeting of the Board.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. KELLY, and adopted:

Resolved, That sealed proposals be received from carpenters, masons, &c., for building a three-story brick building for a Hospital, and that said sealed proposals be opened at the next meeting of the Board; the same shall be advertised for in conformity with plans and specifications.

EMIGRANTS IN THE "RURAL DISTRICTS."

The Agents of the Commissioners who had been directed to visit the several Counties in this State and ascertain the condition of emigrants chargeable to the Commissioners of Emigration, the correctness of the charges made for such support, &c., made their report. In this statement several glaring cases of fraud and gross injustice on the part of the Poor-masters of many counties were exposed, in which charges were made for persons who, for a long period, had not been chargeable, and in a great many instances where they had never been inmates of the Poor-houses. In one county alone, 60 paupers were charged, and could not be accounted for. On the other hand, the returns of many counties were found to be correct. These reports were referred to a Select Committee, to make an abstract of them for publication.

Two Suicides by Taking Laudanum.

JOHN WALKER HAMILTON, residing at No. 299 Mott-street, a man of intemperate habits, committed suicide yesterday evening at the above place. The wife and son testified to his intemperate habits for the last few weeks. Verdict of the Jury—Came to his death by taking laudanum. Aged 42 years—born in Scotland.

Yesterday morning about 9 o'clock, a respectable woman named BRIDGET SAVAGE, aged 45 years, living at No. 110 Ridge-street, committed suicide by taking laudanum. She went to a drug store and purchased nine cents worth, (one ounce,) stating that she wanted it for a liniment, to rub. She went home and drank the whole. The cause assigned for the act was melancholy and dejection of spirits.

The Dyckman Investigation.

The DYCKMAN case came up again before Judge INGRAHAM, in the Common Pleas Court, yesterday. After a protracted consultation between the District Attorney and the Counsel for the defendant, it was finally resolved upon, that no evidence should be submitted to the Court on behalf of the accused. So far, then, as the reception of testimony was concerned, the investigation here terminated.

On Wednesday morning it will again come before the Court, and be formally and in toto submitted for judgment.

The Fashions.

The Fall fashions for gentlemen make a sensation. Hats have a fringe that reminds you of the eyes of the horned owl, and coats have changed into long-tailed surtouts,—very nice in themselves, but such articles as a Broadway exquisite would have made merry over last year. Tailors and hatters have conspired together, and the results are funny. The young "bucks" are conspicuous objects, just now.

Personal.

Among the recent arrivals we notice the name of Mr. JOHN L. NELSON, United States Consul at Turk's Island. It is supposed that his arrival has been occasioned by a desire to lay before the Government the facts in relation to his recent unjust imprisonment by the authorities in command of Turk's Island.

Sir EDMUND HEAD, Governor General of Canada, and family, and Don JOSE MANUEL FIRUNO, Peruvian Minister, and family, left the Clarendon yesterday morning—the former for Quebec and Boston, and the latter for Washington.

Shipping.

The ship arrivals at this port for the month of October have been as follows:

From foreign ports, 351. Steamships, 20; ships, 125; barks, 73; brigs, 96; schooners, 34. Total 351; bringing 30,630 passengers.

Suicide by Shooting.

Yesterday morning, about 2 o'clock, an unknown man was found lying dead at the corner of Washington and Vesey streets. Officer MARTIN, of the Third Ward Police, testifies that he found him at the said place, with his face mutilated and a pistol lying by his side. Officer MAYCALF had a conversation with the deceased two hours previous, at the corner of Fulton and Greenwich streets, when he stated that he had just arrived from the country, and that he was in a destitute condition. Dr. O'HANLON, assisted by Dr. WELTJE, made a post mortem examination of the body. They found several slugs lodged in the base of the brain. Deceased was about 30 years of age, and born in Germany. Verdict of the Jury—"Death by Shooting himself."

☞ The Beatmed Guard, Capt. JAMES DERRICK, numbering 70 muskets, made their second annual target excursion to D. PELLSON'S, Hoboken, yesterday. They contended for 40 prizes, and have a well riddled target.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT CALENDAR—FRIDAY.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT—Nos. 33, 70, 39 to 42; 71, 72, 43, 44.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—Nov. 2.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

Betts against Gilliland.—The jury in this case, for the particulars of which, see the TIMES of the 1st, brought in a verdict of acquittal of the defendant, there being no evidence offered sufficient to sustain a charge of malprocticn.

Moore against Campbell.—This is an action to recover possession of a lot of carpeting, of the value of $452.24, which it is alleged is wrongfully in the possession of the defendant. The defence set up is a general denial.

No DECISION.

Before Judge McCoun.

The People ex rel. Jackson against Hudson River Fire Coal Company.—The matter in this case was denied.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM—Nov. 2.

We are indebted to Mr. THOMAS SPRATT, the assistant Clerk of the Court, for the following report of Judge Ingraham:

Johnson against Naylor, Oct. 18.—This was a motion for a new trial upon a case and exceptions. The facts in the case are sufficiently set forth in the decision.

HOFFMAN, J.—1. There can be no doubt that the term "premises" in the covenant means the house No. 464 Pearl-street, except the basement. The mere existence of the porter-house upon the premises, was in breach of the covenant, whether it was opened under a lease previous to that to the plaintiff or subsequently, regardless he knew of such lease or not.

The evidence then that the plaintiff knew of the lease to Perkins, dated the preceding February, and the evidence that Perkins sublet the premises for a porter house without the defendant's knowledge was properly rejected.

2. It is urged that the defendant had by the previous lease given without restriction, put it out of his power to prevent a porter-house being established, and therefore that he could not keep his covenant. The answer is that he undertook to prevent the employment of its owner, because the plaintiff. (Roche vs. Johnson, 10 Wend. 303.)

3. As the rule of damages, the Judge determined the jury should estimate the damages by taking the gross receipts of the establishment prior and subsequent to the porter house being used. This point has been most thoroughly tested, and is found to be one on practical and reasonable a rule as any that has been suggested. The gross receipts before, and with the house afterwards, formed the fund from which the expenses were to be met. If in both cases the business paid, then the difference was the profit lost by the plaintiff. It would be unreasonable to infer that such was the case.

4. The most important question, as it seems to me, is whether the Chancery relief is demanded beyond the pecuniary loss of this action.

The interest was issued to the

The State Issue.

The contest for Governor in this State lies wholly between Gov. SEYMOUR and MYRON H. CLARK. The presence of other candidates in the field will draw off votes from these two, but it cannot prevent the election of one of them. We give a large portion of our space this morning to the proceedings of the SEYMOUR meeting held last evening in Tammany Hall. Indeed we believe the TIMES is the only journal in the City which presents regularly full reports of the various meetings that have been held in the City in favor of the Democratic nominees. The Herald, since it became a partisan paper, restricts its reports mainly to the section of the Democratic party of which it is the acknowledged organ. We have felt bound to give all parties an equal chance to be heard through our columns, before the public at large; and we have accordingly reported with edifying impartiality Hard-Shells and Soft-Shells—from the Adamantine Mr. O'CONOR, the high minded COONEANS, and the inevitable SHEPARD, down to that valiant brace of pot-valiant champions of human rights and rum against the abominations of prohibition, MIKE WALSH and Capt. RYNDERS. Our columns this morning teem with their effervescent oratory. One would suppose upon a hasty reading of these orations, that the liberties of our beloved land were threatened by some portentous combination of despots, fiercer than the Russian Czar and more potent than the allied foes. We have no doubt that as they penetrate the rural districts, hardy veterans will take down their rusty armor and pick their flints and shoulder arms for the impending fight. But we confess to fears of the reaction when it comes to be understood that freedom in selling Rum is all that is involved in this dreadful hullabaloo;—that the liberty of making Drunkards, and Paupers and Murderers, for the edification of society in general and the criminal courts and tax list in particular, is the only liberty that is endangered. We doubt whether patriotic fervor can be kept up to fever heat after making this discovery. And yet it is the simple truth. Ex-Senator DOMINICK, in his speech at the Tabernacle, reported in the TIMES of yesterday, gave a very graphic and a very truthful description of this Rum Campaign:

I will not stop, said he, to discuss the merits of the Administration now, for I have no time to devote to small matters. [Loud cheers and laughter.] The Administration party of this State, like decaying substances generally, have sought some mode of preservation, [laugh] and finding all other means to fail, they take refuge in alcohol, [renewed laughter] knowing that to be one of the best preservatives of decaying substances known. [Laughter and cheers.] They seem to be, according to all accounts, in better spirits than they were, not because the spirits bear the Custom-House brand, for I believe they have taken the brand off from the casks and put it on the candidates; [renewed laughter;] and their candidate for Governor, the present Governor of the State, has placed himself upon this bung-hole issue alone. [Continued laughter and cheers.] His declaration upon that subject is equal to that of his illustrious predecessor, JACK CADE, who declared that in his reign "the three-hoped pots should have ten hoops, and that it should be made felony to drink small beer." [Laughter.] He, the champion of this interest! Well, if those who wish to know what kind of a champion he is were to ask the opinions of distillers and liquor-dealers in Albany, in relation to his actions at the time he was called upon to veto the bill introduced by MYRON H. CLARK, they will tell you that there never was a vat of beer brewed in Albany which underwent the fermentation that Governor SEYMOUR did before he signed the Veto—that after the Veto was prepared it was a long time before he could be prevailed upon to sign it. And now he comes forward as the great champion of the liquor interest of the State, and seeks to gain a victory upon that ground. And what a proud victory that would be for the Democratic party, or even for the Soft party—a victory which would have to be estimated by the gallon, and measured by the quart. [Laughter.] Now, I have already stated that the Democratic party placed itself upon no such issue, and I take the responsibility of saying here that such an issue is disgraceful to the State of New-York, or any party which bases itself upon it; and I say it knowing what I say, and I will convince the liquor-dealers themselves of this fact, if they will listen to me.

We trust the reports of these meetings will be extensively read, not only in this City, but throughout the State: for they will show the great body of the people what class and what interest it is that demands the reelection of Governor SEYMOUR, and what are the grounds on which their appeal to the people is made.

City Contracts.

We publish in another column a letter from Messrs. ARTHUR & Co., in reply to our comments on the Comptroller's disclosures, concerning the way in which the City contract for its supplies of stationery has been carried out. The statements of fact which we presented were taken from the Comptroller's report, and were given on his authority. So far, therefore, as their accuracy is impeached, Messrs. ARTHUR & Co. make an issue with him, and not with us. It is the Comptroller and not the TIMES, who charges collusion between the contractor and the clerks, in the purchase of articles different from those specified in the contract list. It is the Comptroller who says that when the clerks called to procure the articles required, "the stationer could persuade them that the character of the City would be compromised by the use of these cheap articles," and thus induce them to purchase others.

It will be seen that the contractors allege that very few of the articles specified in the contract have been purchased; and that the Comptroller himself has directed the purchase of others, and authorized their delivery at the current rates to private parties. If this statement is accurate, [illegible] in the absence of contradiction, [illegible] to doubt it,—the Comptroller must take some of the responsibility for the evils of which he makes complaint. The letter shows, moreover, that the contract system is so managed as to be worse than useless. It seems that proposals are invited for the supply, not of such articles as the City needs, but of a miscellaneous list, not a third of which will ever be required. Experience, or shrewd conjecture, or something else, enables some contractors to discriminate between the two;—those articles that will be required are marked at high prices, and those that will not, are promised for almost nothing at all. The low average secures the contract;—and then the articles in the list, and called for, are supplied at the round rates specified, and those not in the list are furnished at the current retail prices.

If this is a fair specimen of the manner in which the contract system is made to operate, in all departments of the City Government, a speedy reform in its administration is imperatively required.

Suspicious Pork—No Panic.

One of our cotemporaries comes into possession of the fact that about one hundred hogs died from suffocation on the Erie Railroad train on Thursday, and that they were purchased by a dealer near Newburg at a dollar a head, and dressed for this market.

We are surprised, in the light of the late oyster panic, that the Journal should throw this new firebrand into the community. Are not the oystermen still suffering from repletion after eating their own oysters, "to save them?" Is there not yet a keener scent for any possible ill-savor that oysters may have, and a marvelously quickened consciousness of any stray pain that may succeed by a day or two their use? Why, then, endanger the pork-trade also? Why frighten us from the sausage-venders? Why set us to scrutinizing with sharpened optics the steaks and spareribs, the corned hams and roasting pieces that we must have, or be no better than Jews?

It is well enough, generally, to put dealers on their guard, but, bless us! somebody will discover next that a cow, dead of lock-jaw, and a sheep over-driven, have been brought into market. Panics are of mighty quick growth. They come up in a night, like mushrooms, but are as hard to root out as witch-grass. Next, some one will discover that our copper-bottomed ships poison the fish in the sea, and so put death in the pot wherever mackerel, and bass, and cod are set to boil. Gently, neighbors—no more panics for the present. Men are unduly excitable until election is over. When it has passed, and the public relapses to its normal state, it will be proper to hear about the distillery-slops that poison the generation under two years old, the starved cattle kept weeks without even water in the butchers' yards, the cheap modes of fattening that "give a body" to very unsubstantial mutton, and a thousand other tricks of men shrewder than honest, by which citizens are imposed upon, and their health tampered with. But, for the present, keep quiet till our palates recover their condition, and matters of diet are out of mind.

The Mayoralty.

An interesting correspondence will be found in another column, between a number of the merchants of the City and JOHN J. HERRICK, Esq., the Whig candidate for Mayor. Mr. HERRICK, in reply to the inquiries addressed to him, gives the most explicit and satisfactory assurances that in the event of his election he will do everything in his power to advance Reform in the administration of our City Government. Mr. H. speaks upon this subject, with the earnestness of one thoroughly impressed with the importance of the subject and determined to do his whole duty in regard to it. His character and well known integrity are sufficient guarantees that he will redeem his pledges to the fullest extent.

☞ The political column of the Sun, which is devoted to the support of FERNANDO WOOD for Mayor, challenged, a day or two since, the publication of certain charges made against him by Mr. E. E. MARVINE. We have been informed that these statements were to have appeared in the Courier and Enquirer of this morning, but that at Mr. WOOD's personal solicitation, their publication is to be postponed. If they are to appear at all, it ought to be long enough before election to give Mr. WOOD and his friends a fair opportunity to answer them. One would suppose that if they are susceptible of being answered, that would be Mr. WOOD's opinion.

☞ The Temperance men of Albany held a meeting last evening for the purpose of responding to the nominations made by the Auburn Temperance Convention. The meeting, which was numerously attended, was addressed by Messrs. HORACE GREELEY and SAMUEL H. HAMMOND, in favor of the nomination, and the proceedings of the Convention were ratified with much enthusiasm.

Theatrical.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—PLANCHE's burlesque of the "Invisible Prince" was done here last night. In productions of this kind, care and completeness are preeminently necessary, and for such reasons burlesques are but indifferently adapted for the transient efforts of "stars." The inevitable drawbacks of a hastily produced work detract seriously from the excellence of the leading artist, and a result unsatisfactory to the latter as to the management is the consequence. These remarks are general, but also have an application to last evening's performance. The "Invisible Prince" with all its fun, has a delicate air of romance interwoven with it, which must be preserved or half the fascination is gone. A very small quantity is retained at the Broadway. Copious Sufficenery supplies its place. A general impression seemed to pervade the artists that plentiful exaggeration was essential to insure success.

Miss ROBERTSON, as the hero, played with great animation, but in the singing gave way to the common fault. Italian singers may be imitated indiscreetly, if their real faults are exaggerated; not otherwise. These real faults were not observable in Miss ROBERTSON's extraordinary rendering of the Reverie aria. It is doubtful if a dozen persons in the house surmised that it was an imitation of an Italian singer.

Mr. DAVENS and the Misses GOUGENHEIM were well up in their parts, and played "with a will."

The "Invisible Prince" was successful, but ere it can acquire the popularity it deserves, it will require more care and more nicety in the preparation. Some of the scenery is good.

BURTON'S THEATRE.—To-night, DOUGLAS JERROLD's new drama, the "Heart of Gold," is to be produced.

THE MAYORALTY.

Correspondence between New-York Merchants and John J. Herrick, Esq.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Nov. 1, 1854.

John J. Herrick, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: We, the undersigned, have seen with great satisfaction your nomination for the office of Mayor, by a large and influential body of your fellow-citizens, and are induced in the exercise of our franchise, independent of all party considerations, to ask a reply to the questions herein, respecting your official course, if elected. We consider this step the most important from the present chances of success, of the different candidates in the coming election;—our sole object being, not the disparagement of gentlemen possessing the high regards of citizens selecting them, but to prevent, as far as possible, the division in strength of those who so anxiously desire the great measures of Reform; and we believe that by concentrating upon your name these ends can be the more effectively secured. It will be deeply regretted by the friends of retrenchment and good order, if by the want of united action the office should be surrendered to any candidate opposed to these views.

We have known you for many years as a merchant and a citizen, and your position and standing in both these relations warrant us in placing entire confidence in your capacity for the post of Chief Magistrate of this great commercial City, with whose interests your own have been so long identified. Of your energy, integrity of purpose, firmness, and high sense of duty, there can be no question among those who know you.

We would, therefore, ask you whether, in case of your election to the Mayoralty, you would devote your whole time in carrying out, with a single regard for the public good, the various measures of Reform, and with your best energies labor to secure the general and speedy enforcement of our laws, the improvement of our Police Department, the suppression of violence and ruffianism in all its forms and phases, now so common; the abatement of public nuisances, the literal fulfilment of all ordinances and contracts involving the regulation and cleanliness of our streets and avenues, the exposure and punishment of delinquent officials, and all such measures as, in your judgment, would tend to the better security of life, health and property, the promotion of good morals, and an economical, impartial administration of public affairs in the City of New-York.

Expecting your reply, we remain,

Respectfully, your fellow-citizens:

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Nov. 2.

GENTLEMEN: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your communication, and to reply frankly, that while in your kind partiality you have exaggerated my qualifications for the office of Mayor, you have not, I trust, done more than justice to my honesty of purpose. I agree unhesitatingly with you, that considerations aside from, and far above, those of party, are involved in the approaching Municipal Election.

Our misguided City must be redeemed, and placed in the position to which, by its magnitude, wealth, and vast commercial importance, it is entitled. It has now the reputation (or more properly the shame) of being one of the most unclean, disorderly, and loosely governed cities in the Union. It has suffered, not only in character, but in its trade, commerce and capital from this cause. The lax administration of its laws, the corruption in the distribution of its patronage, the filthy condition of its thoroughfares, and the lack of due protection for the lives and the property of its citizens, have rendered its name a by-word in rival cities, who have been only too ready to turn to account these drawbacks upon its unequalled advantages.

As one of its citizens, bound to it by the ties of home and family, of personal interest, and of early associations—having lived here all my life, and expecting to die here, I have the strongest possible motives for desiring an honest, energetic and economical management of its public affairs.

Should the duties of the Mayoralty devolve upon me, this much I can at least promise: The laws shall be sternly and fearlessly executed, so far as their enforcement depends upon the action and influence of the Mayor. And, further, I can heartily promise, if elected, to spare no possible effort to remove filth and danger from our streets, to lessen the heavy burden of our taxes, now almost beyond endurance, and to curtail the public expenditures, now outstripping those of many States combined. Uncontrolled by any pledges to party, or to individuals, and untrammelled by any obligation, I can respond freely and cheerfully in the affirmative to all the questions so ably put, in the letter you have addressed to me.

The Government of our City should tend to the increase of its greatness, the consolidation of its interests the happiness and comfort of its citizens, and I cannot conceive of a higher gratification than that of being permitted to aid in the attainment of such results.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

JOHN J. HERRICK.

Fifth Congressional District—Whitney Ratification Meeting.

A meeting to ratify the nomination of THEO. R. WHITNEY, Whig nominee for Congress from the Fifth Congressional District, composed of the Seventh and Thirteenth Wards of New-York and Williamsburg, was held last evening, at the large hall of the Odeon, in Williamsburg.

Preambles and resolutions were read and adopted, setting forth that Mr. WHITNEY was nominated by two-thirds of the legally elected delegates to the Congressional Convention; that the remaining delegates organized and nominated Mr. GERARD E. AROMBURU, as a candidate for the same office; that, in view of these facts, Mr. THEODORE R. WHITNEY is the legally nominated Whig candidate for the 14th Congressional District.

Speeches were delivered by Mr. JOSEPH MORTON, of the Seventh Ward, New-York; Mr. DANIEL FREELAND, Prof. SWEETMAN, and the Hon. THEO. R. WHITNEY.

The course of Mr. WHITNEY in the State Legislature was alluded to in commendatory terms and he was urged as eminently qualified for the duties of a representative in Congress.

Mr. WHITNEY was enthusiastically received. He proceeded to define the principles of the Whig party. The two great measures of the Whig party he most heartily subscribed to, viz: First, "Protection to American Industry," and Second, "Applying a Portion of the Surplus Moneys to Internal Improvements," by which means the products of the interior could be readily transported to the seaboard, thereby causing a demand for labor and lessening the cost of living. He deemed it the duty of every statesman to look to the future as well as to the present interests of his country, and to take such steps as would preserve our civil and religious institutions. If elected, he did not hesitate to say that his first act would be for a reform in the Naturalization laws.

The Hall was nearly filled, and the meeting was composed of orderly and respectable men.

Some works on Agriculture and Horticulture Mr. VATTEMARE also promised to send, as soon as he could make the requisite collection. A vote of thanks and acceptance was passed, and the Corresponding Secretary instructed to communicate accordingly.

The Bible Society.

A regular meeting of the Board of Managers of the New-York Bible Society was held in the Bible House last evening, E. M. KINGSLEY, Esq., President, in the Chair. The Lafayette Fusileers.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times.

Your information in regard to the Lafayette Fusileers, as given in your yesterday morning's edition, is incorrect. The Fusileers are not composed of adopted French citizens, (though they would be proud to be associated with such,)—they did turn out on the occasion to which you refer; they did not on this or any other occasion, object to wearing (since adopted) the white regimental uniform.

Respectfully, A FUSILIER.

The vestibule of the castle is a low stable. Above it is the kitchen, in which are two little beds, joining to each other. The curate and his wife lie on one, and MARGERY, the maid, in the other."

HARRISON.—THOMAS F. MEAGHER, the well-known Irish patriot, spoke a number of minutes in his place to release the information was more circulated by the recent deplorable railroad accident in Ohio. HOLMES & Co. sent with it the bill receipted, as a token of their appreciation of his humane labors on the melancholy occasion.

DAGUERREOTYPE HATS—

There was mending one day, on a stump where he sat,
A hatter by trade, who, without thinking of that,
Swapped off his best hat-brush for a broom which was flat,
Then he tried to swap back; but, oh, no, Mr. Gold Pat,
The broom to take back, for what you've driven off,
I'll dispose of this brush for a DAGUERREOTYPE HAT.

That a hat is a hat, of course all of you know,
But in the style of our hats is where we can show
Our genuine companies, in making them so,
That their beauty surpasses wherever they go;
Then the quality's good, and the price, though 'tis low,
Includes your own likeness in the tip white as snow.

In each contriver's hat we will show an invention,
To secure satisfaction, and make customers mention
Should you lose it by chance, you only need mention,
"My picture with it," and with great condescension
Your hat is returned, lost by its retention
The finder's accused of a guilty intention.

THE CLEVELAND FIRE.—THE SAFE OF J. Morrison Baker, which came safely through the fire of this city, with $39,000 of bank notes unburned, was one of HERRING'S make, despite the indirect claim laid to it by other parties. Here is the evidence:

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 30, 1854.

Brooklyn Voting Men's Convention Lecture.

The first anniversary of this Society, was celebrated last evening in the Plymouth Church. The President of the Association, read the Annual Report, from which it appears that the first steps towards an organization were taken in June, 1853, and perfected in the evening of Sept. 15, following, when 307 young men were present, who signed their names to the Constitution or by-laws; and now there are 708 members.

Whig Meetings.

The Whigs of the Brooklyn Congressional District hold a mass meeting this evening to ratify the nomination of JAMES S. T. STRANAHAN for Congress. Among the speakers who will certainly be present and address the meeting are HENRY J. RAYMOND, of New-York; GEORGE H. ANDREWS, candidate for Congress in the Fifth District, and probably others.

The Know-Nothings—Letter from Mr. Andrews.

Mr. W. R. ANDREWS, the Soft candidate for State Prison Inspector, has published the following letter:

AVON, Liv. Co., Oct. 31, 1854.

EDITORS AFLAS: The Buffalo Evening Post of Oct. 26, makes the assertion that I belong to an organization called "Know-Nothings," &c., &c.

I desire to say, and wish you would publish it, that I neither belong to such an organization, nor do I in any manner countenance it.

I deem it an organization calculated to inflict great wrong upon our adopted citizens, and contrary to the spirit and letter of the Constitution.

I consider it as anti-republican, and at war with the institutions and best interests of our country.

Respectfully yours, W. R. ANDREWS.

Letter From S. Nelson, Esq.—Reply to Charges Against Him.

From the Washington Union.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, The Hague, Oct. 12, 1854.

SIR: The New-York Herald and Tribune have lately published, and commented upon, a statement, derived from their Paris correspondents, in which I am charged with having opened an exchange and banking business in this city, the transactions of which are said to be carried on by three clerks in the office of the American Legation.

Aware of the unscrupulous hostility with which these two journals have for a long time past honored me, I should have treated this silly and malicious charge with the contemptuous silence with which I have left hitherto unnoticed similar calumnies from the same sources.

As it appears, however, that this statement, notwithstanding its evident absurdity, has been republished in the columns of other papers throughout the United States, I deem it due to my own character, and to the dignity of the office conferred upon me by the President, to stamp it as utterly false and untrue in every particular.

I have never transacted any commercial or banking business whatsoever in this residence, nor have I at any time employed for such purpose a single clerk or secretary, in or out of the office of this legation.

The other charges of my traducers I treat with the contempt they merit. My official and private conduct, in the discharge of my duties, is known to my Government, and I have yet to learn that I have given ground for censure or dissatisfaction.

If, in consequence of the call made at the close of last session of Congress, the correspondence in relation to the claim of Captain GIBSON should hereafter be published, it will give to the people of the United States an opportunity to judge for themselves, whether the dignity of the Republic and the rights of her citizens have suffered at this Court by any want of efficiency and energy of mine.

I remain, with due regard, your very obedient servant, AUGUST BELMONT.

To the Editor of the Union, Washington.

☞ NO INVENTION OF THE PRESENT CENTURY exceeds in utility the far-famed ITALIAN MEDICATED SOAP of Dr. GOURAUD. Its properties for removing TAN, FRECKLES, SUNBURN, DISCOLORATIONS, RINGWORM, SALT-RHEUM, BARBERS' ITCH, CHAPS, and every species of Cutaneous Eruptions, border on the miraculous. Not the least among the recommendations of this inestimable Soap is its durability; it can be used to hard, or even cold water, thus rendering it available at sea, where, of course, the luxury of Imperial Cream is out of the question. Hundreds of our naval officers and ship-masters bear witness to its excellent qualities.

Dr. GOURAUD'S POUDRE SUBTILE eradicates superfluous hair from any part of the body. Nothing looks so well on a man as a commanding forehead, and in many individuals this cannot be obtained except by the use of Gouraud's Poudre Subtile.

Dr. G.'s Instantaneous LIQUID HAIR DYE is another article of primary importance, inasmuch as it will instantly change red, gray, or white hair to a beautiful brown or black. The demand for GOURAUD'S LIQUID VEGETABLE ROUGE is enormous. One bottle of the Rouge given to the patient lasts the healthful hue of the most rosy, and is absolutely innocuous by washing or rubbing. LILY WHITE, when applied to the skin, brightens to an astonishing degree the brilliancy of the complexion.

HAIR RESTORATIVE not only prevents lost hair, but prevents falling out, and renders stiff, wiry hair soft, silky and glossy. Cures dandriff, &c.

Found at GOURAUD'S old established Perfumery Depôt, No. 67 Walker-st., first store from Broadway.

☞ FINE AND EXTRA FINE MEATS—Consisting of Beef, Mutton, Lamb and Veal, in quarters or cuts, for cash, by THOMAS F. DE VOE, Nos. 7 and 9 Jefferson Market.

Made Drunk—How one of them Carried out.
Reported for Tribune, Tuesday, Nov. 3, 1854.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Tribune:

SIR: Nothing in the morning papers several similar versions of an affair of honor which took place on Fort Green last Tuesday morning, I now report, on the 'of the parties engaged in the affair, [illegible] you a full and truthful account of the affair. I do not wish to give the real names of the parties, I will specify them as Mr. A. and Mr. F. [illegible] meeting existing for some time between Mr. A. and a certain young lady residing in Gold-street, Brooklyn. Mr. F. was slightly acquainted with this young lady, and of course admired and respected her. On Saturday last, all the parties engaged in this affair unknowingly met, and in the course of conversation the young lady's name was casually mentioned, when she was spoken of by Mr. A. in a slighting and insulting way. Mr. F. immediately replied to him, in a most indignant manner. This led to further words between them, when they parted, with a mutual understanding that the affair was not to end there.

After several notes passing between them, they finally agreed to meet at Hoboken on Wednesday morning at 5 A. M. The time was subsequently changed to Fort Green, and the time to Tuesday morning, as it was feared the affair might be interrupted by some persons cognizant of the circumstances, the quarrel being quite public. The parties met at Fort Green on Tuesday morning, at a few minutes past 5 o'clock, and exchanged three shots, Mr. F. receiving A.'s ball in his shoulder, causing a slight flesh wound; his ball passing through the hat of Mr. A. The parties then became reconciled, Mr. A. withdrawing the offensive expressions he had used against the young lady, and Mr. F. also withdrawing the words he had spoken to Mr. A. The parties then returned to their homes. This, Sir, is a true and unvarnished statement of the affair.

Respectfully yours, JOHN B. NILSON,
One of the Seconds.

KINGS COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT—THURSDAY.
Before Hon. Judge Dean.
THE DOG QUESTION.

The People vs. Owen Maloney alias Owen McCluskey.—In this case Judge Dean rendered the following opinion this morning:

The prisoner was indicted at the Kings County Sessions for grand larceny, in stealing a Newfoundland dog of the value of $100, the property of Richard Todd. He was then arrested on a capias issued on the indictment, and in default of bail for his appearance to answer the indictment, was committed. He is now brought before me on habeas corpus and his discharge on his own recognizance asked for, on the ground that a dog is not property whereof a larceny can be committed.

The case has been argued at length by the prisoner's counsel on one side, and the District Attorney on the other, and strange as it may appear, when the number of dogs to be considered, and the value which for various purposes is put upon them, the question seems never to have been decided in this State.

It is impossible for me at the Circuit, constantly engaged in the trial of causes, to examine the subject at length, but I have given to it that attention which my time would permit, and will proceed to state the conclusion to which I have arrived, and briefly the reasons which have led to it.

At common law, a dog was not the subject of larceny. A reference to "Roscoe's Criminal Evidence," "Archbold's Criminal Pleadings," and "Blackstone's Commentaries," supports this proposition indisputable. The rule is there stated as follows: "As to those animals which do not serve for food, and which therefore the law holds to have no intrinsic value, as dogs of all sorts, and other animals kept for whim or pleasure, though a man may have a here property therein, yet they are not of such estimation as that the crime of stealing them amounts to larceny."

By this it appears that not only was it no crime to steal a dog, but that a person might secretly take and carry away a whole menagerie and be entirely guiltless. The reason of the rule was, that these animals were of so base a nature that it would not do to make the taking of them a felony; at that time larceny was punishable with death, and it was indubitably to put clear of murdering a man for a dog or a beast, that the decision was made and followed in subsequent cases. The reason of the rule no longer exists, and on that ground alone the rule might cease to be operative. But the common law has been adopted in this State, and it do not feel disposed by Judicial Legislation to abrogate any part of it. If we had no statute which was in conflict with it, I should feel bound by the ancient doctrine which I have cited. But I think the Revised Statutes are inconsistent with the common law rule. By them, dogs are for regarded as property, so as to be, in certain cases, the subject of taxation. The owner is made liable for the acts of his dog, thus recognizing that a dog has an owner, and consequently that the thing owned is property. For every civil purpose, yet only by Statute, but by the decisions of our Courts, a dog is regarded as property. The owner may bring an action for any injury inflicted upon his dog. If taken or he may bring replevin or trover. But the wanton and malicious killing, or the wrongful taking, of the property is indicted. (3 R. S., 670, 463.) "Every person who shall be convicted of the felonious taking and carrying away the personal property of another, of the value of more than $25, shall be adjudged guilty of grand larceny." The same chapter, page 463, gives to the term "personal property" as meaning "goods, chattels, effects," &c. It is to term whether this chattel. Bouvier in his Law Dictionary, says a "chattel is a term including all kinds of property, except the freehold and things which are parcel of it."

If these statutes, therefore, do not clearly abrogate the common law rule, they raise so grave a question as to render it impossible for me to issue habeas corpus to discharge the prisoner. He must give bail or be remanded, and he cannot can present the question by demurrer, by moving in arrest of judgment or in other, so as to bring the matter up at General Term, and if necessary to the Court of Appeals.

The bail was fixed at $250, which the prisoner obtained, and was discharged from custody.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Meagher Republican Grenadiers and the Priests.

Father KELLY continues his pulpit admonitions against the Meagher Republican Grenadiers, of Jersey City. Yesterday—the day after the company's ball—he denounced them anew from the altar. He said that they were all bad, except the Captain (HOPPER,) and First Lieutenant (SOMERS); that they never attended worship; and added that SOMERS was a policeman in the Old Country, and that he had kept a porter house and sold rum, since his arrival here. (Mr. SOMERS has a stationery store.) KELLY added, further, that the company advocated the principles of the Know-Nothings, and liked the system of tarring and feathering the priests; that they had led away the young from the altar and the faith of their forefathers, and taught them to defy the Church; and that, at the late ball, the guests consisted chiefly of a lot of ruffians from Washington-street, New-York.

We are assured that twelve members of the guard are members of the communion; that a dozen of them pay regular pew rent in the church, and that much disapprobation has been expressed in relation to the conduct of the pastor and curate, and that the latter was publicly hissed yesterday. Father KELLY, however, denies that he has used the impure language attributed to him, and declares that he will repeat Sunday after Sunday, whatever he has said. So the matter stands.

INTERESTING INCIDENT.—Some few weeks since the police officers found a little boy, seemingly about five years old, in the streets, and took him to Mr. HILL, the city crier, for him to ascertain the whereabouts of his parents. Mr. HILL tried by all the means in his power to find them, but without success. The boy was a chubby, rosy, interesting little fellow, but was too young to give any account of himself, other than that his name was CHARLES HENRY MURRAY, and that he had a "Sissy Polly." Yesterday afternoon a policeman found a little girl about three or four years old, in Washington-street, and took her to Mr. HILL'S. The instant the boy placed his eye upon her he cried out "Sissy Polly!" and rushed towards her with all signs of affection. The little girl seemed like the boy very much. Whose they are is impossible to say, but they are undoubtedly brother and sister, as the recognition proved. Nature makes no mistakes. Mr. HILL had them both with him in his carriage yesterday, in Court-square, where they attracted much attention.—Boston Post.

From the Albany Evening Journal, Nov. 1.

DEATH OF MRS. TOWNSEND.

Sudden and deep gloom came over a wide family circle this morning, by telegraphic intelligence from West Point, of the death of Mrs. ISAIAH TOWNSEND, than whom no lady of Albany was so universally known and respected.

Though for some time in enfeebled health, Mrs. TOWNSEND had left home to spend a short time with her daughter, Mrs. WALKER, at West Point, hoping for improvement from the change. But alarming intelligence was received yesterday, and to-day the worst apprehensions are realized.

Mrs. TOWNSEND has lived among us as the beloved and honored matron of a numerous family, and the benefactress of all who needed protection, assistance or sympathy, for nearly fifty years. We are sure that no other lady has done so much good, in all practicable ways, and in a spirit so truly Christian like, as Mrs. TOWNSEND. With her, active and thoughtful benevolence was an every day virtue. She rose daily with the sun, to gladden and warm all the hearts, not only of her household, but with which she was associated in works of charity.

Upon the receipt of information yesterday, Mrs. TOWNSEND'S sons and daughters repaired immediately to West Point, arriving in season to take a melancholy leave of a much loved parent, whose departure was painless, calm and peaceful.

THE DEATH OF GOV. BURT.—The Omaha (Nebraska) Arrow Extra, of Oct. 18, contains the following particulars of Gov. BURT'S death: FRANCIS BURT, Governor of Nebraska, died at the old Presbyterian Mission House, at Bellevieu, at about 3½ o'clock this morning, retaining at the last hour a realization of his situation, and surrounded by the friends who accompanied him from his Carolina home. Immediately upon his arrival in the Territory, he was confined to his bed by sickness, occasioned by the long and tedious journey hitherward, commencing, we are informed, upon reaching the limestone country of Tennessee in his overland journey to Louisville, Ky. Retaining, about an hour previous to his death, a consciousness of his situation, he called his friend, Mr. DOYLE, who had accompanied him from South Carolina, to his bedside, and gave such directions concerning his private matters as the urgency of the case seemed to demand; then calling Rev. J. HAMILTON to his bedside, after a brief conversation, he passed into that sleep which knows no waking. He was a native of Pendleton, S. C., and was about 45 years of age. He leaves an affectionate wife, two sons and four daughters to mourn their afflicting bereavement. One son attended him and was with him in his last moments of life, and will return to the paternal roof with the corpse of him who, in the prime of life, with high hopes left his native land, but a short time ago, to enter upon the discharge of the arduous duties to which he had been assigned. In Governor BURT the people of the Territory have lost an intelligent, efficient and generous officer, whose death is most truly lamented by the people of Nebraska and the adjacent towns in Iowa.

The People's Bank Swindle—Opening of the Books.

From the Cincinnati Commercial, Oct. 30.

The depositors in the People's Bank, after an assignment had been made to F. MALLON by P. B. MANCHESTER, were notified to call at the Bank on Saturday, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and the real state of affairs should be made known to them. Some time before the appointed hour, the sidewalk in front of the Manchester Building was covered by depositors, anxious to receive a gleam of hope, or to know the worst. A large majority of the persons thus assembled were laborers in their work-day garments, with toil-hardened hands, and sun or furnace-bronzed features—men whose money had evidently been earned by hard dry knocks, men, too, who had attempted to save something for their families, who had worked extra hard and long, and lived in the most rigid style of economy to put a little money in bank for a "rainy day." And there were poor laboring women who toiled until their faces were pinched and their fingers crooked to get "something ahead," and had deposited dollar by dollar in the People's Bank, prayerfully, and thought that they were planting "good seed," and providing against the chances of sickness or other misfortune.

At last the door opened, and the crowd poured into the Bank, and waited again, as many as could leaning against the marble counter, over which they had passed their money into the hands of the banker, being told that it could be drawn at any moment, and would bear interest while it remained. The upturned eager faces, stiffened into an almost hopeless but resolute expression, would have [illegible] proceed on [illegible] of Mr. MALLON, before, as remarkable. The counter got behind the counter as well as in front of it—there was nothing behind the counter that was worth special caring for, no piles of bank notes or glittering gold.

Capt. HALDEMAN, on motion of Mr. MALLON, assignee, took a chair at the counter, and called the meeting to order; but there seemed little necessity for the call to order, as a stillness almost breathless prevailed. Mr. MALLON read a carefully prepared statement of the liabilities and assets of Mr. PETER B. MANCHESTER. It appears that the real estate of Mr. MANCHESTER—the block of buildings on the southwest corner of Third and Sycamore-streets, on which there is a ground rent of $2,000 per year; the Art-Union building, on which there is a ground rent of $1,000, and the residence on Seventh-street, are mortgaged for just about their full value. Between three and four hundred persons had on deposit with MANCHESTER the sum of $155,000. MANCHESTER had made drafts on St. Louis to the amount of $3,000, which would not be paid, of course, and which would be returned to augment the debt. He had raised some $2,500 on notes left with him for collection, so that the amount of indebtedness above that secured by mortgages and other securities was $140,000, and to this sum is to be added the store bills, which it is presumed will amount to $10,000.

The only assets certainly available, is the furniture of his house, which is very rich, and a costly library. These effects may bring at public sale $5,000. There are notes belonging to MANCHESTER falling for about $2,700, most of which are good for nothing, and altogether worth perhaps $1,000. The amount of overdrafts shows that reliable men have overdrawn $1,400. So that, without allowing for the expenses of reducing to money the personal property, we have $7,400 to balance $140,000, and store bills to an indefinite amount. The announcement of the assignee that the creditors would have five per cent. of their deposits (half the interest without the principal) was received by a roar of laughter, but there were those who shed tears.

Mr. MANCHESTER had deposited as collaterals notes entrusted to him for collection, to the amount of $7,003 76. These notes, in addition somewhat dubious. Mr. MALLON stated that Mr. MANCHESTER informed him that these notes would be assets enough to pay off the depositors dollar for dollar, and that he would have done so only because he was "crowded," and did not feel personally secure. Mr. S. J. BROWNE stated that MANCHESTER had given him the most solemn assurance of his ability to pay his creditors one hundred cents on the dollar. The vault of the bank was examined, and found to contain a box of insurance policies, some old checks, the books of the concern, and three one dollar bills on broken banks. The books, said Mr. MALLON, had been well kept, but some of Mr. MANCHESTER'S more recent transactions, such as pledging as collaterals notes entrusted to him, seemed to have been unknown to the book-keeper. There was one item of personal property of Mr. M. not yet mentioned, the naming of which by the assignee caused some amusement, i. e., a pew in the Second Presbyterian Church, worth, according to the estimate of the Trustees of the Church, $300: Mr. MALLON thought that perhaps it was worth $200.

On recapitulating the household goods exempt from execution, the bedsteads were referred to. According to law, the family required four beds—one for Mr. and Mrs. M., and four for the seven children. A voice suggested that a good place for MANCHESTER to take his rest would be in a meat tub!

The total amount of MANCHESTER'S indebtedness is $240,000, and of this there will be a clean dead loss to the People of at least $125,000. The aggregate of mortgages held against the real estate is $79,500. The mortgage notes for more than half this sum are already past due. The ground rents, taxes, insurance money, and interest on mortgage notes, will nearly, if not quite, consume the rents of the buildings. But it is thought, if the holders of the mortgages will show due forbearance, and not foreclose the property at once, that the houses may be rented, and the sales so managed at more prosperous times, to leave a surplus beyond that which is called for by the mortgages, to be divided among the depositors. And if the real estate alone can be made to meet the demands of the mortgages, there will be considerable railroad stock, now held with the mortgages, free to go for the benefit of the depositors, and it may be possible that 10 per cent. will be paid on their deposits.

A long consultation was held by the depositors; Mr. F. FRANK, of the Museum, and Rev. S. J. BROWNE, were the principal speakers. It was finally concluded to appoint a Committee of Three, to look minutely into matters, and, for the satisfaction of depositors, ascertain, with as much precision as possible, what had become of the notes, money and securities, and see whether there was any clue by which anything more than discovered by the assignee, could be made available. The most complete confidence, however, was generally expressed in the integrity, energy and discretion of Mr. MALLON. The Committee consists of F. FRANK, S. J. BROWNE and T. J. HALDEMAN, who will proceed to look into matters, and report on a week from next Saturday. The principal real business of the Committee will be to consult with the mortgagees, and persuade them, if possible, to be forbearing, and give the depositors a chance.

The East India Squadron.
Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

We have received the following interesting communications from correspondents in the U. S. East India Squadron:

U. S. SHIP SUSQUEHANNA, Hong Kong, 1854.

I send you the following correspondence between Captain BOGANAN of this ship, and Captain O'CALLAHAN, of her Britannic Majesty's steam frigate Encounter, called forth by a serious accident which happened to a seaman on board the latter vessel, while firing a salute in honor of our National Day (the Fourth of July) at Shanghai, which shows the good feelings and sympathy that exist between the officers and men of the two services. Yours, &c.

U. S. SHIP SUSQUEHANNA, Shanghai, July 10.

MY DEAR SIR: The officers and crew of this ship and the Vandalia have heard with serious regret of the sad accident to one of the crew of the Encounter on the 4th instant while firing a salute in honor of our national day.

These accidents to seamen are always distressing, but, on this occasion, it is peculiarly sad and deeply lamented by the officers and crews of the Susquehanna and Vandalia. As the loss of the right arm deprives the unfortunate man of the principal means of supporting his family and himself, the officers and crews of the Susquehanna and Vandalia are anxious to assist in relieving his distress, and it is with sincere pleasure that we send him the enclosed Bill of Exchange for £[illegible] sterling, which we beg him to accept from his brother seamen as a proof of our hearts' felt sympathy.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,
(Signed) FRANK'N BUCHANAN,
Commander.

Capt. G. W. D. O'CALLAGHAN,
Commander H. M. S. Encounter, Shanghai.

H. M. S. ENCOUNTER, Shanghai, July 11.

MY DEAR SIR: CHARLES LYNE, the seaman who lost his arm while firing a salute in honor of your National Day, (4th instant,) begs me to secure the Captains, officers, and crews of the Susquehanna and Vandalia of his deep gratitude and thankfulness for their kind and generous consideration of the misfortune.

Allow me, Sir, also to express my own feelings on this occasion, which are, that I see in this token of sympathy not merely an act of charity, but one which is evidence of a sentiment of good-will and kindly feeling between our respective nations. Such it has been my good fortune ever to find where the service has brought me in contact with the navy and people of the United States of America; and I cannot refrain from declaring my own hope and belief, that with those capable of such liberality and consideration, as it is in this instance my duty to acknowledge, a more extended intercourse will but tend to improve those feelings which exist no less to the honor than the advantage of the two countries.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed,) G. W. D. O'CALLAGHAN, Capt'n.
Capt. F. BUCHANAN, Commander U. S. steamer Susquehanna.

U. S. SHIP SUSQUEHANNA, Hong Kong, Aug. 21.

We arrived on the 17th inst. from Shanghai with his Excellency, ROBERT M. MCLANE on board, having stopped on the way at Foochow Fu, Amoy, Wham-poa and Macao. The Mississippi, Powhatan, Southampton and Lexington are here; the Supply at Canton, Vandalia at Shanghai, and the Macedonian is daily expected from Manilla. Upon her arrival here, Capt. ABBOTT is to take command of the squadron. Com. PERRY goes home on the 11th prox., by the overland route. This ship, together with the Mississippi and the steamship Southampton, leave in about ten days for Japan, where we take in coal and proceed to the Sandwich Islands. From there this ship goes to San Francisco, and the Mississippi to Valparaiso and around Cape Horn home. What will be done with us upon our arrival at San Francisco is uncertain, as our crew's term of service has long since expired, and we shall have to ship a new crew, or lay up the ship there.

Our officers and crew will have been absent four years before we can go home, and up to this date death has carried off twenty of our number.

All the vessels of the exploring expedition are here, but I am sorry to state that Com. RINGGOLD is sick, and it is reported he will have to go home immediately.

The rebels are in possession of the suburbs, and a great number of the villages around the country, and it is expected that the city itself must soon fall. Great numbers of the wealthy Chinese are leaving Canton for Macao and Hong Kong, and all trade must soon come to a full stop. Yours, &c. RUMOR.

RELIGION OF THE AMERICAN PRESIDENTS.—The religious belief of the fourteen persons who have filled the Presidential chair in the United States, as indicated by the attendance upon public worship and the evidence afforded in their writings, may be summed up as follows: WASHINGTON, MADISON, MONROE, HARRISON, TYLER and TAYLOR were Episcopalians; JEFFERSON, JOHN ADAMS, JOHN QUINCY ADAMS and FILLMORE were Unitarians; JACKSON and POLK were Presbyterians; Mr. VAN BUREN was of the Dutch Reformed Church; and President PIERCE is a Trinitarian Congregationalist.—Boston Transcript.

Boston Riot (Young Age.)

A friend has sent us a full and complete account of the expenses of the town of Boston from May, 1853, to May, 1854—being the printed report of BENJAMIN SEAVERNS, Town Treasurer and Collector. It is interesting to note what changes have been made during the past half century. Sixty years ago Boston had seven schoolmasters, whose salaries were $566 64 per annum. The others had $433 33 a year. The whole amount paid for salaries to teachers, and the incidental expenses of the schools, was only $16,697 15—of which sum $6,295 12 was required for a new school-house. The expenses of the schools now are $329,606 39. The salaries of all the teachers are $9,260 46; now they are $193,020 41. The Watch Department in 1804 cost $6,657 60. In 1853, it was $87,302 96. The salaries of city officers and judges were $3,954 23. Now they are $66,252 98. The expenses of the Fire Department was $1,441 65: now it is about $70,000. In 1804, the amount paid for the repairs and widening of streets, was $12,210 69; in 1853, it was $253,036 10. The sum then paid for assistance rendered by the Overseers of the Poor, was $15,339 90. Last year it was $87,000. The total expenditures of the year 1804 were $71,491. The city tax was $88,800; the town's proportion of the State tax was $17,620, and the county tax was $20,200, making a total of $125,820. Among the expenses in 1804, we find the following items: Expenses of "visitation dinner," $368 10; ink to the schools, $40; expenses of several town committees, $44; "regulating" jury boxes, $62 50; repairs, and cleaning the Old South Church, after a town meeting, $92 50; expenses of visit to Deer Island, $274 66. Who will say after this that our officials do not follow the example of their "illustrious predecessors" in some things? Query—How much punch did it take to enable the authorities fifty years ago to "regulate the jury boxes!"

A WHALE STORY.—Nearly three years since, in company with over one hundred other passengers, I sailed in the ship Plymouth, Capt. PAULSON, from San Francisco to Realejo. A few days out we fell in with a whale some sixty to seventy feet long and which kept in our company twenty-four days, and only left us when we got on soundings—close to our port of destination. This whale, most of the time, kept directly under the ship's bottom, and so close, that on several occasions the keel must have touched him, as we could see that his back was scratched by the copper. He would come up to blow every twenty to thirty minutes, ranging a few rods from the ship—almost always to wind ward—and then resume his berth under the keel; and whether we went fast or slow it was always the same to him. On going down he would almost invariably come within two rods of the ship, with his head opposite the mainmast, and slowly settle to his place, his flukes being even with the rudder. On one occasion we lay becalmed for two or three days, with two other vessels about half a mile off. Our whale paid them a visit of an hour or two each day, but always came back to his quarters. After he had been with us five or six days we got tired of his company, and an attempt was made to drive him off by firing into him; and a few days after, the effort was repeated, but he would not leave us. Thirty or forty heavy rifle balls were fired into him, some of which struck him in his blow-hole, and drew blood, but all to no effect; and except on one occasion, when a ball hit him at the bottom of a spur on the back, (when he gave a slight shiver,) we could not perceive that he felt them, although many of the balls struck him when not more than two or three rods from the ship. On the days after the shooting, at every shot-hole would appear a small white bulb, but in three or four more days he would show no signs of having been injured. During the passage we were close to many other whales, but our whale paid not the slightest attention to them. Persons on board who professed to know, called this a Sulphur Bottom Whale, whether correctly or not, I cannot say.—Exchange.

HEALTH OF CHARLESTON, S. C.—There have been but two deaths from yellow fever in the last four days. We have made careful inquiries, and find that this indication of the departure of the epidemic, is confirmed by the general report of the physicians. In the Marine Hospital, there is no case of fever on hand; in the Almshouse there has been no new case since Monday last, and the only fever patient remaining in the establishment is convalescent. In the Roper Hospital, there has been but one new case since Wednesday; and in all, there are but five cases under treatment, no one of which threatens a fatal termination. In private practice, the cases are very few; and we rejoice to say, that all our prognostics of the termination of the epidemic are verified. We can no longer consider it as a "prevailing disease."—Charleston Mercury, Oct. 30.

Literary.

☞ A new English publication, intended specially for booksellers, and called the Intelligencer, has the startling piece of news, that Mrs. STOWE is a large shareholder! And this in the manner thereof: "Her slaves are numerous, and, what slaves are not generally, rather respectable; more than that, they are slaves of capital, and are actually doing very good businesses at the present moment. They are the publishers of London. From the moment Uncle Tom's Cabin landed here, these London publishers had no rest. Directly it came out, there were a dozen of them reprinting it, each running frantically all over the trade with his own little shilling book; when they went to bed at night, when they woke in the morning, it was Uncle Tom. With Ida, Ida, Ida, rang the woods. The life of some London publishers at that time was one fever of the mad. Then there came a lull. They rested from their labors. Uncle Tom disappeared gradually from shop windows, from parlor chairs, from back kitchen corners, and in the book trade we had a little peace. Several of the publishers went down to the coast to recruit after the tremendous wear and tear of such a fearful excitement."

☞ Our Friend, a well directed monthly Magazine, observes that the antediluvian life must have been a great contrast to ours. "Only fancy having two dried whales hanging up in your larder, and a cold mammoth, 'cut and come again' on the sideboard. 'Shall I help you to a little of this ichthyosaurus soup?' Thank you; I should prefer a slice of your mastodon. Stewed plesiosauri! Remove; lovisthan a la crapodeine? Imagine a bill, not at two months, but two hundred years; and a fellow, who carried off your plate-box, getting sent to the tread mill for the term of fore-score summers. Conceive an elderly gentleman, with a liver complaint of only one hundred years' standing, wearing out four sets of false teeth, and finally carried off, after a brief illness of three hundred and ten years, in a gulping consumption."

☞ The Registrar-General announces, somewhat triumphantly, that the British population contains "a reserve of more than a million unmarried men, and of more than a million unmarried women, in the prime of life, with as many more of younger ages;" and that if these celibate millions were married, it would result that the births per annum, instead of being 700,000, would be 1,600,000.

☞ Before the expedition started for Sebastopol, it is said the Sultan made a present to the British sailors; and it was one certainly more consonant with the established sentiments of the true British tar than with those which are supposed to be hereditary in the descendants of the Caliphs—he gave them five hogsheads of rum.

☞ A few days ago, as the wife of a butcher, of Crosley, Wilts, was whitewashing their cottage, she pulled away an old board from the ceiling, when £370 in gold fell to the floor.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western brands appear dull and heavy. Shoulders are not to be had at 7½c.@8c., in fact at any price, for the market is bare. Sides sell at 7½c., but they too, are only in limited supply, and on Saturday holders were disposed to advance the price in consequence of the enhanced rate at New-Orleans. The time, however, for speculation in shoulders and in two or three weeks more new will be in the market.

RICE—Owing to the very limited supply on hand, the transactions are light. This day's sales embrace but 60 casks old and new crops at $5 12½@$5 50, ₩ 100 lbs. Messrs. EUGENE O'SULLIVAN & Co., inform us that the stock on hand in this market on the 1st inst. was as follows: 107 casks new crop, 125 casks and 148 bbls. old crop, and 230 bbls. broken Rice—together, 620 casks and 270 bbls., being about the smallest quantity held in this market, at this time of the year, for many years past.

MEDICAL.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION.—By DR. A. M. MAURICEAU, Physician of Women. One hundred and fifty-first edition, price $1. (In Four Parts, separately, $1 each.) Every consideration is also given with regard to the Pelvic description, with the causes, the symptoms, and also proper mode of treatment in a plain, simple, but in the most modest language, easily understood, and thus every man of common sense may be his own physician, in all those delicate complaints, the nature, character and causes of her complaint; and be spared much anxiety and suffering. The work should be read by every married man who feels a desire to be a father, and to prevent being a mother his own need of learning the sad advice of the wisest importance to her future health, in respect to which, will find much to delight and advise, and also valuable many improvements which other wise would occasion anxiety or alarm. How many are suffering from constitutional or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine the health, the effects of which are to prevent, and for which there delicate females need no medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri, falling of the womb, or from fluor albus, (Weakness or debility, &c.)! How many are in constant pain for months preceding confinement! How many have difficult, if not dangerous deliveries and slow and tedious convalescence? How many lives are hastened down with their weak and ill health! Now to prevent the mistake of prescribing, some learned and valuable, yet how many useful elements, have much English, might have been spared in the suffering, to her husband, to her relatives, by a timely possession of this little volume. It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage. PEALON'S PARISIAN LOTION.—It is hard to say whether this extraordinary cosmetic is most useful in Winter or in Summer. Not only does it preserve the delicateness and softness of the skin in defiance of old Boreas, but it also dissipates, in an incredibly short space of time, every trace of tan or freckles which the sun and country air may have left on the complexion. Ladies returning from spas or the seaside will find it invaluable for restoring the pearly transparency of the skin; and we would advise them to lose no time in sending to PEALON's establishment, St. Nicholas Hotel, for the supply of the article. Also, for sale by all the fancy stores in the City and country.

Literary.

☞ It is said that out of 400 young men just now seeking British Government employment, only 30 could pass the following examination, simple as it is, viz.: To write a good business note; take down a paragraph from a standard author from dictation; write out the names of the different counties in England, and exhibit a knowledge of the four first rules of Arithmetic. Of the incompetents it is said that the majority were offshoots of the aristocracy, and not of the middle class whom CORBETT used to conjure to "turn away their eyes from Somerset-house."

☞ A street-sweeper of Portman-square lately died, leaving a handsome fortune, all acquired in the business of the broom. A street-sweeper, regularly at his post, is the observed of observers, and grows into the public confidence. He is preferred for holding horses, and is trusted with errands. We (Examiner) had once occasion for the services of a man high in the profession who exercises his broom in Cavendish-square, and a deputy appearing in his place, it was explained with due solemnity that the principal had been sent for by the Spanish Ambassador!

☞ A benevolent man, who proves his wish to save time by throwing it away on foolish calculations, has discovered that in forty years a snuff-taker devotes twenty-four months to blowing his nose! In the same time he has also spent, we have calculated, eighteen months in putting on his stockings and pulling them off again.

☞ The Cardinal-Vicar of Rome has issued an edict in which, after attributing the cholera to the sins of the Romans, he directs that the finger of St. Peter, the arm of St. Rea, the heart of St. Charles, and other relics, shall be exposed to the adoration of the faithful, in order to avert the wrath of the Almighty.

☞ The Marquis of Westminster once possessed a diamond for which the East India Company offered £30,000; and yet this diamond, when submitted to public auction, only fetched rather more than £7,000.

OUTRAGE.—We are very sorry to learn that on Thursday evening the windows of Rev. Mr. LONSDELL's house at Laprairie were broken by some miscreants. This seems only part of a regular system of outrages, the windows of the Church of England Chapel in that village where Mr. L. officiates having been repeatedly broken, and attempts made, since they have been closed with shutters, to wrench them off in order to demolish the windows. We still more regret to learn that the authorities of the village, though applied to, have taken no effective steps to detect and arrest the perpetrators of these disgraceful acts or to prevent their repetition. Such supineness on their part, will, there is reason to apprehend, lead to retaliation.—Montreal Gazette, Oct. 30.

FROM VANCOUVER'S ISLAND.—The Salem Gazette, of yesterday, reports that a letter received in that city from Puget's Sound by the last Pacific mail, states that a fleet of five French and four English man-of-war were at Victoria, Vancouver's Island, in the early part of September. They were probably watching for Russian ships of war and commerce.

Delirium tremens has more than doubled, according to the Montreal Medical Chronicle, its percentage among the troops, during the last thirty years, and the ratio of deaths to the whole number of cases, is increased one-third.

THURSDAY, Nov. 2—P. M.

The Imports of Foreign Merchandise entered at this port for the month of October were:

In dutiable goods, consumption direct	$7,045,071
Dutiable goods, warehoused	3,210,646
Free goods	1,099,227
Total entries	$10,949,444
Against entries, October, 1853	11,920,423
Decrease in October of this year	$970,979

There was also entered during the month Foreign Gold and Silver to the amount of $68,654. The amount of Goods withdrawn from Public Warehouse was $2,070,544. For the ten calendar months of 1854, the comparative Imports are as follows:

IMPORT OF FOREIGN GOODS AT NEW-YORK.

	1854.	1853.
January	$19,818,000	$13,406,000
February	16,816,000	17,256,000
March	16,113,000	19,106,000
April	16,073,000	16,320,000
May	17,015,000	14,232,000
June	13,689,000	17,346,000
July	20,694,000	19,600,000
August	22,619,000	19,682,000
September	14,103,000	18,997,000
October	10,949,000	11,926,000
Total ten months	$161,766,000	$163,646,000
Decrease this year		$1,879,000

This decrease is not important in amount, of itself, and the progress of Importation is yet too large for the comfort of the Money Market; but, in connection with the Export tables in our last paper, the following result is shown in favor of a diminished Foreign balance, at New-York, for the ten calendar months as compared with 1853:

Decreased import, as above	$1,879,000
Increased Export, Domestic Produce	2,132,000
Increased Export, Gold and Silver	12,836,000
Total difference, favor 1854	$16,840,000

There was not much change in Money or Stock affairs to-day, as compared with the previous three days of the week. The variations in rates and prices were slight, and the difference in confidence was scarcely perceptible, though both were, if anything, for the better. There is much depression in all speculative values at the Stock Exchange, and much both inside and outside of Bank to discourage the Mercantile interest, so far as it rests upon borrowing Money. There are few so sanguine as to see decided encouragement immediately ahead for an altered condition of things, in either respect, but there is certainly a reasonable hope that the rapid liquidation of the past six or eight weeks, at home and abroad, and the promptness with which the heavy requisitions made by the Banks and the Foreign trade have been met, will bring a favorable turn after the 4th of November, both in the Specie export, and the supply, if not the rates of Money.

The sales of the three principal or most active Railroad Stocks, to-day, were substantially at yesterday's figures, closing this afternoon a fraction higher: New-York Central 85, Reading 70¾ and Erie 42¾. There was an improved Cash demand for Central, and fewer contracts on time. The operations in Erie were to a moderate amount. Reading was in request at the Second Board at 70¾ cash, and 71 on short option to the buyer. The other Railroads were either neglected or sold down. Hudson River touched 37 ⅌ cent.; a fall, since the proposals for a new Loan were issued, of 7 ⅌ cent. The receipts of the Road for October, at the improved passenger fares, were $160,842, against $153,256 same month in 1853. There was a large business in Illinois Central Bonds at 89¾@¼, nearly $100,000, part of the purchases reported to be on European order or for speculation abroad. Virginia State Bonds were in request at 90¼@¼, a slight improvement in price, with more disposition to take hold at the very reduced figures. Indiana Fives are offered less freely. Some parcels of North Carolinas and Louisianas, sent from the West by the Free Bankers, hang upon the market at low figures. New-York Central Sixes have declined to 84½ since the dividend, equal to 87½ before 1st November. The dividend funds for the two Western Roads, alluded to yesterday as being behind hand or not in proper shape, came forward to-day; and we hear of no new default. Mr. PATCHIN, of the Buffalo and New-York City Road, has determined to pay the dividend money provided last week, into Court, where proceedings had been commenced against his Company on the May default. Erie Incomes sold at 92 ⅌ cent. Several of the City Banks have made November dividends, since our last notice—the Bowery 4 ⅌ cent. The Sun Mutual Insurance Company earned, for the year ending 1st inst., $1,916,000 in Marine premiums, and paid out $1,881,000 in losses. The reserved Capital of $1,000,000 remains good; notwithstanding the extraordinary disasters of the year.

The payments into the Sub-Treasury today were $237,626, including $100,000 on transfer from St. Louis, made through one of the Banks, and $50,000 in Gold from Chicago. The payments were $54,486. The regular balance is up to $7,074,295, which with the special and Assay accounts, makes an aggregate Specie accumulation of nearly ten million dollars at New-York. The amount in all the depositories, subject to draft at the close of October, was $26,046,112, of which $4,798,396 was at Boston; $5,124,761 at Philadelphia; $3,910,164 at St. Louis; and $2,201,370 at New-Orleans. There are no considerable engagements of Specie for the Bremen packet on Saturday yet spoken of. Money, outside of Bank, is worth 12 ⅌ cent., except on very prime signatures, which are not abundantly offered. The large mercantile Banks are doing all they can, with prudence, to help their customers over the 4th of November, but some of them plead poverty, and refuse to risk a diminution of their Specie reserve.

The regular Auction Sale of Stocks and Bonds by Mr. S. DRAPER takes place to-morrow, (Friday,) at the Merchants' Exchange.

We publish below a communication from Mr. ST. JOHN, the Superintendent of the State Bank Department, in reply to an attack, which some one, not satisfied with his inflexible purpose to do equal justice to the note holders of the exploded Eighth-avenue Bank, caused to be made on his course in the Herald. It is made quite apparent by this reply that Mr. ST. JOHN has given undue importance to the dissatisfaction of certain interested parties, for no one else can question the entire correctness of his action. It is a plain case of duty and fairness to all the note holders of a concern, which on examination by a special Commissioner, whose report has just been sent to Albany, proves little better than a fraud upon the public.

Eighth-avenue Bank.

BANK DEPARTMENT, ALBANY, Monday, Oct. 30, 1854.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

My attention has been called to the following article, that appeared in the money article in the Herald on Saturday last:

"The Superintendent of the Banking Department at Albany does not entertain the same opinion regarding his duties for any length of time. It appears that on the 16th inst. he promised to surrender securities in exchange for Eighth-avenue Bank notes—a proportionate share of bonds and mortgages and stocks; and on the 25th, when the amount of bills was sent us for redemption, upon his own terms, he refused to surrender anything but bonds and mortgages. If the Comptroller has any control over this branch of his department, it would unveil enough for him to look continually into the manner in which his affairs are managed. We have frequently noticed that some of the everyoung Banks have dealt with a good deal of consideration, and yet, sacrifices allowed for winding up so as to prevent the loss to bankers, will, either are just through in double quick time, without any regard to the interest of any one concerned. It appears to us that favoritism is carried out of sight in the administration of public affairs, particularly where such important interests are concerned as are involved in the business of banking."

I regret that the writer should consider it necessary to publish an article so entirely destitute of truth, to gratify or accommodate any person, and particularly as it is calculated to mislead the public in relation to my official action in regard to the Eighth-avenue Bank. I propose, therefore, to make an brief statement of my action; and I think it will show, if not to his satisfaction, to the satisfaction of the public, that the allegations contained in the article referred to are without even a shadow of foundation in fact.

The first allegation is, that "I promised on the 16th instant to surrender securities held in trust for the notes of the Eighth-avenue Bank."

On that day I received, per Express, without previous notice, understanding or agreement, two packages of notes of the Eighth-avenue Bank, said to contain about $20,000—and also two letters from CHARLES SANFORD, Cashier of the Eighth-avenue Bank, of which the following are copies:

EIGHTH-AVENUE BANK, 8th avenue, corner of 23d-street, NEW-YORK, Oct. 9, 1854.

D. B. St. John, Esq., Supt. Bank Department:

DEAR SIR: Please deliver to JOHN THOMPSON, Esq., $12,682 of New-York State Stocks, 5 per cents, of 1858, held in trust in the Bank Department for the Eighth-avenue Bank—for the same amount of circulating notes which he will deliver you, and oblige yours respectfully, CHARLES SANFORD, Cashier.

Hon. D. B. ST. JOHN: Please send the Stock, with power in blank, to me. Yours, J. THOMPSON.

EIGHTH-AVENUE BANK, 8th avenue, corner of 23d-street, NEW-YORK, Oct. 9, 1854.

D. B. St. John, Esq., Supt. Bank Department:

DEAR SIR: Please deliver to Messrs. CARPENTER & VERMILYE, Five Thousand Dollars of United States Stock, 6 per cents, of 1856, also Two Thousand Dollars of United States Stock, 6 per cents, of 1862, making $7,000 held in trust for the circulation of the Eighth-avenue Bank, for the same amount of circulation which they will deliver to you, and oblige, yours respectfully, CHAS. SANFORD, Cashier.

Please forward as the above-mentioned Certificates of United States Stock.

CARPENTER & VERMILYE, Per G. W. MAXWELL.

These letters contained the first intimation which I received, that the Bank desired to return its circulation and take up the securities deposited and held in trust for the redemption of the outstanding notes issued to it. On the same day, I returned the following answer to Mr. SANFORD:

BANK DEPARTMENT, ALBANY, Oct. 10, 1854.

Charles Sanford, Esq., Cashier:

I am in receipt of your two letters of the 9th inst., requesting me to deliver $12,682 New-York State Stock to JOHN THOMPSON, and $7,000 United States Stock to Messrs. CARPENTER & VERMILYE, now held in trust for the Eighth-avenue Bank. I have also received two packages of notes of said Bank, said to contain the above amounts.

I cannot comply with your request, for reasons which I think you will consider satisfactory. I am credibly informed that the Bank has suspended payment, and has refused or neglected to redeem its notes on presentation. I could not, therefore, allow you to withdraw stocks that are worth, and that command a premium, thereby allowing a portion of the bills belonging to the bank itself to be paid at par, at the same time surrender to it the premium on the stocks and allow other bill-holders to rely upon bonds and mortgages for the redemption of their notes. Another reason is, that the securities now held in trust amount to $100,682, just the amount required by law. This amount could not, legally or properly be reduced, without giving notice of the intention of the directors of closing up the bank altogether, and in that case I should require you to take up the bonds and mortgages, or a proportion of them, so as to keep at least as large a proportion of stocks as is now held, that the value of the securities should not be impaired or diminished. The experience of the past is, that bonds and mortgages will not bring their par value on a sale, and under such circumstances I am clearly of the opinion that I would not be justified in giving up stocks that are worth more than par and retain bonds and mortgages without satisfactory assurances that the circulation would all be redeemed at par. In fact, I do not think that, under the circumstances of the case, your bank being discredited and rumors rife of improper conduct on the part of one of its officers or agents, that I could return or surrender any securities held in trust for the notes sent me, until some arrangement is made to redeem all the notes. I shall, therefore, hold the notes until I am satisfied that all the bill-holders will be fully protected, in case of winding up, or that the bank is in a safe and sound condition and able to meet its liabilities. Respectfully,

D. B. ST. JOHN, Superintendent.

This letter contained the only "promise" that I made to surrender securities; and I did not think that JOHN THOMPSON, or any one else, could consider or construe it into a promise to give him up securities for the bills of the Eighth-avenue Bank. I certainly did not so intend it, and I do not think the public will so consider it. It is evident that Mr. Cashier SANFORD did not, for under date of Oct. 17, he writes as follows:

EIGHTH-AVENUE BANK, 8th-avenue, corner of 23d-street, NEW-YORK, Oct. 17, 1854.

D. B. St. John, Esq., Superintendent Bank Department.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of Oct. 16 was duly received. I cannot say but your opinions are correct in regard to retaining the premium stocks, but I had thought that as the canal revenues bore but a small premium, you might yet be willing to surrender them, to Messrs. CARPENTER & VERMILYE and J. THOMPSON, as the premium on the other stocks would help make up any loss in the mortgages. The notes of the Eighth-avenue Bank they sent you were not the property of the Bank, but belonged to the parties sending them, so of course must be subject to their order. I shall ever know the course this Bank will pursue and will advise you.

Yours, respectfully, CHARLES SANFORD, Cashier.

The next charge is, "that some of the suspended banks are treated with a good deal of consideration, while others are put through in double quick time," &c.

In reply to this, I would state that immediately after the Bank of the Eighth-avenue Bank was known through the papers, I revoked the powers of attorney given to the Cashier to collect the interest on stocks and bonds and mortgages, for the purpose of protecting the billholders as far as possible, and that the first package of protested notes was not received at the department until the 16th inst.; two other packages were received on the 23d, and one on the 25th inst. In each case a notice was immediately sent to the Bank as required by chap. 202, laws of 1850, and chap. 203, laws of 1851, to redeem the same within fifteen days from the dates of the several notices, and that in case of failure to do so, the notes would be redeemed out of the trust funds according to law.

The Superintendent has no power, by law, to apply the trust funds of a failed Bank to the payment of its bills without first giving the fifteen days' notice to the Bank to redeem. The first notice, in this case, was given on the 16th, and the time that the Bank has by law to pay the notes does not expire until the 31st inst. I believe no Bank has been "put through in double quick time." The notice required by law has, in all cases, been duly given, and in case the Bank did not then redeem the notes, the securities have been converted into cash, with as little delay as possible, and the avails paid to the billholders.

On the 30th inst. JOHN THOMPSON, through his agent, Mr. GREENLEAF, again presented some $11,000 of the notes of the Eighth-avenue Bank, with an order from Mr. SANFORD to deliver him $4,000 bonds and mortgages, and $7,000 in stocks. This was refused, and Mr. GREENLEAF was informed as to the law—and also that the Bank had allowed its notes to be protested for non-payment—that the owners had caused their protested notes to be deposited in this department, and that I should not feel justified in surrendering any portion of the stocks for an equal amount of bills—as it might materially affect the interests of the billholders in case the Bank should not redeem its circulation, and I should be obliged to sell the bonds and mortgages to pay the bills. Mr. GREENLEAF then inquired if I would give up an equal amount of bonds and mortgages for the notes; to this I assented, as the Bank had given notice of the determination of the Directors to close up the business in the usual manner, provided the officers of the Bank would give an order to that effect. He replied that he would write to Mr. THOMPSON; that if THOMPSON concluded to do so, he would send up the notes and the required order from the Bank to make the exchange.

The notice of winding up the business of the bank is dated Oct. 25, and is signed by the President and Cashier. It was received and filed in this department on the 26th, the same day on which THOMPSON's agent called and presented the order for the securities.

No promise whatever was ever made by me, directly or indirectly, to any person or persons, that I would surrender the securities held in trust for the Eighth-avenue Bank on a return of the circulating notes, except as stated in this communication.

I object to the Herald writer charging me with official misconduct or favoritism, by insinuation or otherwise, until he has some better evidence of the fact than he has in this case, where I have only endeavored to protect all the billholders, instead of allowing the securities that are worth more than the par value to be withdrawn, for less than their value in bills, and allowing the other billholders to take the chances of getting their pay out of the proceeds of bonds and mortgages.

The call upon the Comptroller to look into this branch of his department, betrays at least a want of knowledge in relation to it. The writer should know that the Bank Department is a separate and independent department, and has no connection with the Comptroller's Office, or with any other department of the State Government. See chap. 104, Laws of 1851.

As Superintendent of the Bank Department, I am alone responsible, to the banks and to the public, for the management of its affairs; and the writer only knows, that so long as it may be my duty or fortune to administer the duties pertaining to the office, they will not only be discharged impartially and faithfully, but independently and fearlessly, according to the best of my judgment and ability. D. B. ST. JOHN.
